

MVA angers Glamorgan cottagers

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

They had been grinding their axes for weeks, and when a group of cottagers upset with a new system of property tax assessment reached Glamorgan council last Tuesday, their blades were razor sharp.

"Everybody feels railroaded into this. We're being treated as if we don't have anything to say about this," Lorrie Saville of the Big Glamour Lake Cottagers' Association said about the introduction of 1988 market values as the basis for municipal property tax rates.

The new system updates property values from 1980 to 1988 figures and simplifies the calculations.

Since the value of lake-front properties increased greatly between 1980 and 1988, and non-lake properties increased by less, taxes on the average lake-front building will increase. Councillors said the average increase will be $35.

But cottagers complained taxes are going up two, three, or four hundred dollars on average.

Bob Macauley, of the Koshlong Lake Cottagers' Association, said "This has taken us by surprise, and the implications are severe. We're concerned. Why was there no opportunity for public discussion, why no public meeting? There are a hell of a lot of people who aren't here tonight who don't have a clue about what's happened."

The municipality held an open-house on the new system, but many cottagers say they were not told in time to attend. A number of the 11 cottagers present came up from the Toronto area for the council meeting, and returned home afterwards.

Deputy-reeve Glen Madill defended the council's decision, saying "it was a judgement call. We thought it was a fair system. We can't call a public meeting on each individual thing that comes up."

Macauley, Saville, and cottager Graham Beeby attacked both the process by which the new system had been imposed, and the system itself, which they said was not fair to them.

They said since they do not live in the community year-round and do not get the benefits of education or social programs their taxes pay for, they should not have to pay more than permanent residents.

But Madill said "rural residents don't enjoy the lakes, and our taxes pay for the Skydome deficit . . . If the value is there, you should pay your fair share."

Councillor Clive Taylor defended the system, saying the county plans to bring it in next year, but is scared to do it this year because of the upcoming elections.

The properties hit with the largest increases, he said, will be those that have been grossly underassessed and have been paying less taxes than they should have been for years.

He said the lowering of taxes on Road allowance procedure sees increasing intervention

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

The Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ministry of the Environment are playing an increasingly significant role in determining who will be granted building permits or have rightful ownership of shoreline allowances — but this may cause a headache or two for buyers, realtors and local municipalities.

"Back in the 1960s there wasn't as much concern because we didn't have the developmental pressure we have now," says Barb Boland of the MNR in Minden. "In a sense we're being driven by the greening of society, seeking ways to maintain and enhance what we have."

Since the late 1800s, municipal governments have used their discretion in allowing private parties to purchase land once reserved for public access 66 feet along the shores of Ontario lakes. But now the issue is not so much public access versus private ownership, but public ownership as a means of containing development which threatens the natural landscape and wildlife in the area.

The closure of these crown lands, referred to as "shoreline road allowances", has become more complicated in the last two years. Since 1989, provincial government agencies such as the MNR and MOE have been recommending that roadshore allowances leading to and around certain lakes in Ontario not be closed by municipalities and that building permits not be granted when the health of a lake is considered to be in jeopardy.

One of the ways the MOE determines the sensitivity of a lake is by monitoring the number of trout in lakes from year to year. Ontario has approximately 250,000 lakes but only about 2,000 of these have lake trout. This small percentage accounts for almost one-quarter of the world's supply.

Lake trout require water that is cold and high in oxygen, which is why trout live very close to the bottom of lakes. During the summer, the temperature of a lake warms at the surface and oxygen is depleted from the bottom up. This leaves only a narrow band of water bet-

Break-ins skyrocket, police warn cottagers to take precautions

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

A 300 per cent increase in cottage robberies this year has police warning people to not take security lightly.

"People are coming up and literally shopping. They look in the windows and if there's something they want they'll break in. If not they'll move on to another cottage," says Constable Mike Maybee of the Minden OPP.

Over 200 cottages have been robbed since January, but Maybee says many were not noticed until the Victoria Day weekend, when people opened their cottages for the summer.

His advice to cottagers trying to avoid burglaries is "don't leave expensive equipment lying around. VCRs, satellite tuners, the people haven't marked them, so they might as well kiss them goodbye. If you're going to be gone for four or five months close your curtains."

"These people will not waste their time breaking in if they don't know if there's anything in there they want," he says.

Staff Sergeant Bill Elliott told a community policing meeting in Wilberforce that cottagers should make their buildings more secure. "A $9.50 lock won't keep out a determined burglar."

He warned cottagers not to leave guns lying around over the winter because "it's not a responsible way to store weapons."

WATER MEETS FIRE: Dysart volunteer firefighter Gerry Walker sprays water over the flames which completely gutted the second home lost to fire for Marion Teatro. There was no way to stop the Eagle Lake blaze.

Tragedy strikes again

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

Fire destroyed a house in Eagle Lake Thursday morning, bringing another tragedy to a family already suffering the affects of a previous fire and auto accident.

Marion Teatro and her two sons lost the house they were renting just months after their house in Donald burned to the ground.

And last November Mrs. Teatro was in a serious truck accident, breaking her collar-bone and cracking her ribs.

The fire department was called at 9:15 a.m. Thursday, but by the time they brought the fire under control flames had already gutted the building, leaving little more than the walls to save.

The Fire Marshal's Office is investigating the cause of the fire.

Davis wants county council to be more open, responsive

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The county's procedural rules "somewhat restrict and deny access to people coming to county council," says Dysart's reeve, who will be proposing changes to make the system more open.

"I would like to streamline it to allow delegations to present themselves to council," says Bill Davis. If an issue being discussed by council affects the general public, "any delegation should have a right to address council, preferably not after the fact."

Earlier this month, Gary Kenney and John Beachli were not allowed to present their concerns about the county's 35.7 per cent budget hike. Instead, they were told to meet with the management committee. Those meetings are closed to the press and public, but the committee has invited the businessmen to the next county council meeting.

The present procedural by-law says "a person who is affected by a recommendation to be dealt with by the council may make application to the clerk to appear before the council at the meeting at which it will be dealing with the recommendation of a (county) committee, providing an application is submitted not later than seven days preceding the council meeting or by applying to the clerk no later than noon on the day prior to the scheduled meeting of county council. Granting such a request shall be subject to time available on the agenda and approval of the warden."

Davis has no problem with needing the warden's permission because "some things (and) you can be resolved in other ways (and) you

Ratepayers want to have more influence

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

The county budget may be the catalyst, but "latent annoyance" with how Anson, Hindon and Minden council is operating has created a coalition of lakeside ratepayers' associations dedicated to running candidates in this year's municipal elections.

Vern Gilbert says "it's time the large number of lakeside ratepayers have some direct input on decisions made in council."

He says the group, called the Anson, Hindon, and Minden Ratepayers' Association (CAMHRA), wants to monitor off-lake economic development and ensure on-lake preservation and replenishment.

He says the group is worried the municipality's development plan could harm the lakes.

The policy the group develops, which will be announced at a meeting on June 1, will be for the whole municipality, not just the lakes, Gilbert says. "It leaves the we-they mentality behind."

The group has eight or nine ratepayers' associations in the municipality.

Two candidates for the municipal elections have already been selected, full-time residents Jean Anthon of Mountain Lake, who was Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations president for four years, and Grant Plooard of Horseshoe Lake.

Gilbert says the coalition hopes to find a candidate to run for the board of education.

CALLING ALL DYSART TAXPAYERS: The Haliburton Rotary Club will be selling two types of composters at a reduced price to Dysart taxpayers. Displaying the 'green cone' are Amin Shivji and President Kim Emmerson.

Composter offer turns Rotary green

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Next to recycling, home composting is a popular form of environmental preservation. And with this in mind, the Rotary Club of Haliburton has instituted a program to ensure every Dysart et al taxpayer has the opportunity to buy a composter — at a reduced price.

"We're hoping to get a big response," says Amin Shivji, chairman of Rotary's environmental committee. Interested cottagers have already approached the club about the project.

The Ministry of Environment will contribute two-thirds of the purchase price for each composter, which consumers can pick up for $20. Two types of composters will be available, Rubbermaid's Green Cone and the 12-cubic-foot-square Soilsaver.

"You can buy as many as you like," says Rotary President Kim Emmerson.

Order forms for the composters have been attached to Dysart tax notices which are being mailed out tomorrow. But for those who don't receive a tax notice, an ad for the project and a coupon to purchase a composter will be placed in the next issue of The Echo.

Rotary hopes to have the composters ready by July and August, at which time a pick-up location will be announced. The club can't estimate how many composters will be needed since they are pre-sold, but has kept in mind Dysart mails out over 10,000 tax notices annually.

Church camps out at Illahee

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

All the happy sounds of camp life will be heard once again on Drag Lake.

The United Church Council has leased Camp Illahee for the summer, reviving what was once a thriving summer tradition.

"We're very thankful for the opportunity," says Loretta Harris at the Toronto office. "We've signed the lease for one year with the option to lease again, which looks as if it will probably happen."

Harris is registrar and secretary of the Toronto United Church Council's Scugog Camp Northwoods. The Scugog Lake camp will be closed for at least a year because of environmental problems — a polluted waterfront and insufficient sanitary facilities.

The Council thought of buying another camp, but another camp would probably mean other problems, so it was decided to re-develop Scugog Camp Northwoods. In the meantime, however, they needed a place for the financially handicapped families which make use of the facilities.

Two years ago, a lack of funding forced the owner of Camp Illahee, Metro Children's Services, to stop sending youngsters with medical problems to Drag Lake. MCS has been very receptive to the Council's offer to lease the camp, Harris says.

The Council provides recreational opportunities for 300 children, teens and mothers who might otherwise not be able to afford camp. It costs about $55 a day per camper, but the Council charges only $12 a day. The rest of the funding comes from the United Church's Camping Opportunity Fund, which in turn is funded by congregation donations.

"We have been finding donations have been dwindling," says Harris, who must run the camp with a tight budget. Some people still find the $12 a day fee prohibitive "but we're in the situation we have a budget that's going to be in the red unless people put their hands in their pockets and be generous."

Correction

Poleline Construction, which is owned by Mark and Georgia Hewson of West Guilford, was not attempting to woo the construction bid for the new Little Hawk Lake Dock away from other contractors at Stanhope's last council meeting.

Also, the 100 inch loom at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery is rented by the Haliburton Highlands Weavers and Spinners.

The Echo regrets any confusion these mistakes may have caused.

can have nuisance people." But not all county councillors, let alone the public, know what's going to be discussed at a given council meeting. Someone who would like to address council on an issue would therefore not be able to get on the agenda on time.

"If we have important issues that affect everyone, maybe we should be serving notice publicly," Davis says. "Lots of issues come up that people aren't aware of."

Kenney and Beachli's problem with the county procedure was only part of the catalyst which sparked Davis's plans to introduce changes to the by-law, he says. Although amendments to the by-law were made recently, "things happened along the way that opens your mind to other avenues. If anyone has something to address to county council, they should not be denied (the opportunity) to present themselves."

At the next management committee meeting, Davis will present his proposed changes. Then the issue could be discussed by county council, which next meets on July 17.

commercial properties is good because "it encourages industry to preserve what little employment we have here."

And he said the old system taxed people with lower value properties, who can least afford high taxes, at an unfair level.

Taylor also praised the new system for simplifying the taxation process. Before, taxes were based on a market value assessment, multiplied by the percentage change of 1980 prices with 1940s prices, and multiplied by the mill rate. Now all that happens is the market value assessment is multiplied by the mill rate.

Ron Young, the regional assessment commissioner, says "it puts the accountability of taxes on the values of the property, not on a mathematical calculation."

The cottagers asked members of council to attend their annual meeting on June 15 to explain the change. Madill said someone from council would go, and they would try to get someone from the assessment office there as well.

SURVIVING THE BOMB

Martin Lumber employees are making the best of it despite depressed local economy and bleak future

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

IN A LETTER to the editor in the May 30, 1990 edition of the Echo, Thomas Coghlan wrote: "When Lyn McLeod, Minister of Natural Resources, refused to transfer G.W. Martin licences to Robert Bury Company, a willing buyer, she should have dropped an atomic bomb on Martin's mill. This would have been a lot less painful and more humane. The results of her actions will cause much hardship and pain for people in the surrounding fifty-mile radius."

One year later, the prospects are still bleak for many of those who were left unemployed by the closure of Martin Lumber in Harcourt in the Fall of 1989. Many are still unemployed today, or have left the area in search of jobs where they are trying to apply very specific skills in a declining market.

For many like Herman Poppe, a Martin employee for 20 years, the end of Martin's was a sign of the end of the lumber industry in the area. "As far as I can see, the lumber industry is close to dead in this county," says Poppe, who at 48 years of age, has taken up a second career as a paralegal.

Poppe is still very bitter. He was friends with founder Grenville Martin's children, and he says they have not contacted him in a year and a half. "I was an executive of the estate and it was just a matter of it disappearing over night."

And because of the poor local economy, Poppe's paralegal business has been in low demand. He has prepared a couple of people for bankruptcy who "worked very hard and weren't living high off the hog." And in such cases, people can't afford to pay a middle man, so often Poppe doesn't make money for his services.

"We're going to hang on here as long as we can," he says. Poppe and his wife Heather have now depleted their life savings and because they own two homes, they are not eligible for unemployment insurance. They have had their Otter Lake Road home up for sale for three months, but there is little hope of it selling as long as the real estate market is so depressed.

Poppe is willing to commute to Peterborough or Lindsay for work, but he has not been successful at finding a job even after sending out 700 resumes.

"It's frustrating and depressing," says Heather Poppe, who runs a small craft shop from their home. "There is no reason why we shouldn't be able to work and live in this area. We're healthy and willing to work. If you were lazy there would be no excuse."

Ralph Watson worked at Martin's for twelve years as a foreman in charge of production and safety. He was one of only four people kept on at the mill for security purposes until January 1991. Now, if all goes well, he will be manager of the new sawmill, which is to be built in the next year to replace the $10-million complex which burned to the ground only a day after it re-opened on January 7, 1991.

"There are going to be radical changes," says Watson about the lumber industry in the 1990s. The industry is going to have to scale down, and there will be more production of smallwood than hardwood, he says. "It's no longer timber the way old timers thought of it. You won't often get a two-inch-diameter log into a sawmill anymore."

Smaller operations will have to be able to process a tree from top to bottom, in just one pass through the mill if they are to be economically feasible, says Watson. And there will likely be more two-men operations with portable mills which are more or less a hobby for some people.

Watson has been working closely with Frank Yantha and Don Foley, present owners of the Martin lumber yard, now called Harcourt Lumber. Yantha is optimistic about rebuilding the mill, but says it is taking a lot longer than anyone imagined because the loss was bigger than they had anticipated. "It took us a long time to get proof of loss because no one knew what was in there."

To this day it has not been determined what started the fire in sub-zero weather back in January. Because everything was covered in ice, the fire marshal was unable to fully assess the situation, so the completion of the investigation will get underway in the next few weeks.

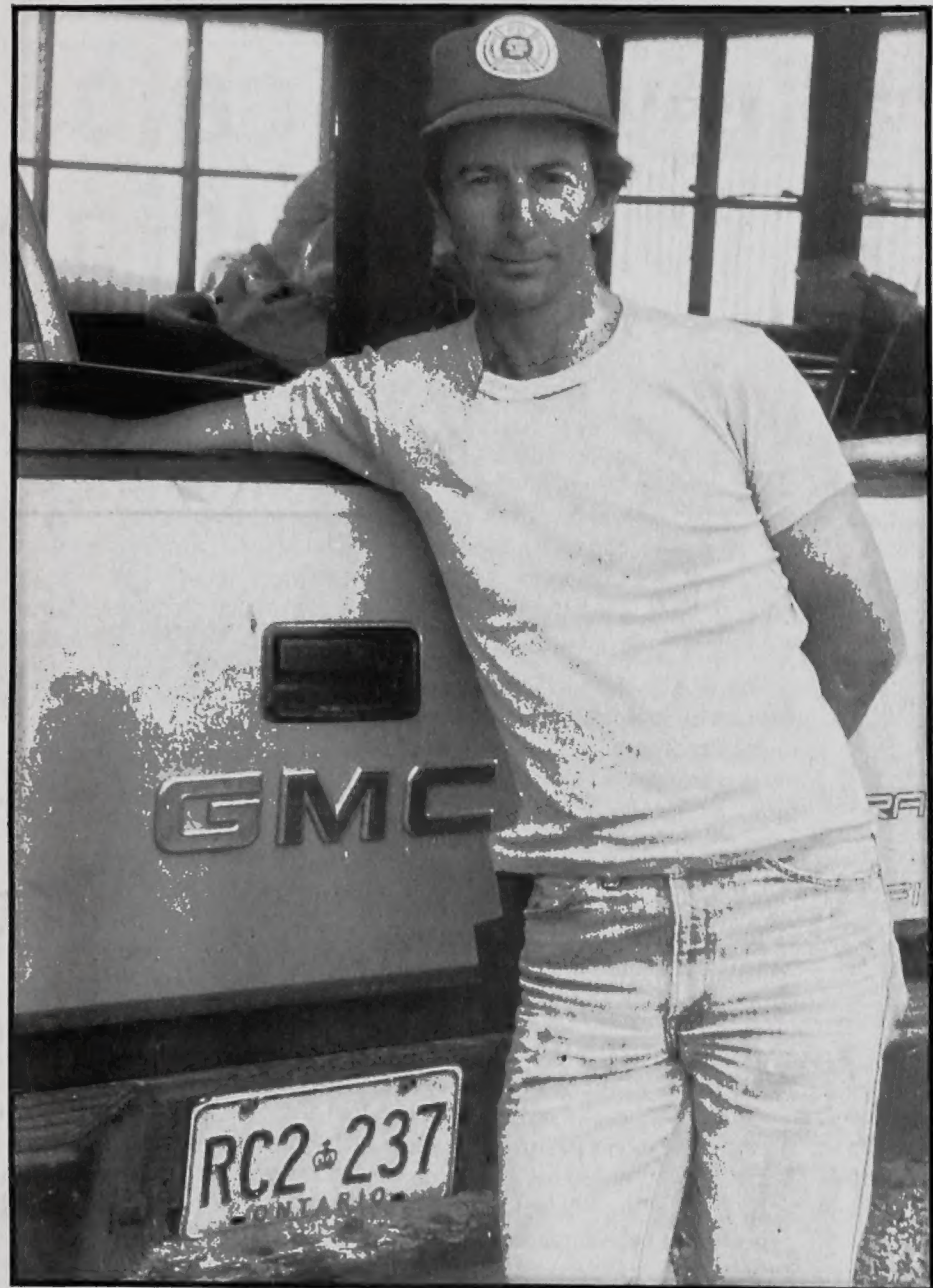

But it will likely be government bureaucracy that will stall the clean-up, says Watson. It will have to be determined where the cement blocks and all the rotten timber can be disposed of, and this will require permits or designated land-fill sites.

"Former employees and those not even previously employed with Martin's but living within a 50-mile radius of the mill are hoping this will get off the ground," says Watson.

"I'm not going to hold my breath — the sawmill industry doesn't look good. You talk to local businesses around here and they're not employing anyone, and they're running skeleton crews at the Wilberforce Planing Mill in this area now."

Wren Hughes, along with Thomas Coghlan, are representatives on an employees committee which formed in June 1990 with the hope of securing severance pay for Martin's employees and starting a retraining program for those wishing to continue working in the industry.

Although most workers were eligible for unemployment insurance for a year after they were laid off, the committee was able to outline a benefit program for those 55 and older who were not able to embark on new careers. It entitles about 13 ex-Martin's employees with 15 or more years of service, to 70 per cent of their unemployment insurance when they were laid off, until they're 65. The program, sponsored equally by the federal and provincial governments, took effect in April.

The employees committee also arranged a driving course for ex-Martin employees who wanted to obtain their A and Z licences to qualify for other employment. They also set up a carpentry course through Sir Sandford Fleming College in Haliburton which was held for 16 weeks at Martin's airplane hangar.

Twenty-three-year-old Perry Roy started at Martin's when he was 16 years old when he "didn't know enough to go to school." After being laid off at Martin's he went to work at Coney's Tree Farm in Bancroft, but it was seasonal work and he found himself unemployed again last fall. He was able to collect unemployment insurance while he took the carpentry course which ended three weeks ago.

"It was a good course," says Roy, "and it would be nice if it was run again. Guys between 40 and 50, all they know is lumber, and no one's there to hire them. But I'm young and I can learn quite a bit yet and I'm going to try and get as much work as I can."

Roy says he would prefer to apprentice as a carpenter now that he has picked up certain skills, but he'll go back to piling lumber or working in the bush if he has to. "You've got to take whatever you can get right now."

Burton Robinson worked as a lumber inspector for Martin's for 24 years, and is also a graduate of the carpentry course — with an 89 per cent average. He found the course "interesting", but he hasn't been successful finding work since.

"I'm not a young man," he says, "and turning 50 without a job is like a slap in the face." Robinson has since gone into the carpentry business on his own. "There are so many others out of work, why should I go into it and be the same way?"

Robinson says he was spoiled with all the tools available at Martin's because the high cost of tools makes going into business for oneself difficult. He also worries that he may forget many of the skills he picked up in the carpentry course as long as he is unemployed and doesn't use them. But he reminds himself that he does have his notes from the course and if all else fails, he'll ask a lot of questions, just as he did when he started out at Martin's more than 20 years ago.

The employees committee is still trying to get severance pay for all Martin employees, preferably retroactive to when the NDP government took office October 1, 1990. "We're not having much luck with our MPP Dennis Drainville," says Hughes. "He made promises and indicated a strong commitment to helping us when he was electioning, but we haven't heard from him since."

In a telephone interview, Drainville said he had tried to contact Frank Yantha on a number of occasions to find out what was going on. He said that if Yantha has had negotiations with the government, he wasn't aware of it, and that government bureaucracy is so large that it would be easy to escape his notice.

Drainville also said that he and his party agreed during the election campaign that there should be severance for Martin employees, but it was never discussed who would receive severance or how much it would be.

"Those aren't the kind of promises you can give," he said. "Our government came in a year after the fact when the thing was a fait de complis. The thing was as dead an issue as it could be and there were all sorts of expectations, but all the decisions had been made by union and management."

"The people of the area have received a bad situation not of their making and have tried to make a go of it," says Drainville. "I do see it as my responsibility to work on their behalf to get them as much as possible and now that I am aware that there is some thought about this on the part of local people, I will re-double my efforts to contact Yantha and find out what is going on."

Meanwhile, Thomas Coghlan, a Martin's employee for 26 years, says he is still convinced that former Natural Resources Minister McLeod refused to issue a new timber license to Martin's under new ownership strictly for political reasons.

Coghlan has been working for the Ministry of Transportation for the last several months and finds it reassuring to know that if he is unemployed in the near future, the 55-plus plan for ex-Martin's employees will kick in immediately.

But Coghlan doesn't have much faith in the Road allowance sales a cause for confusion

ween the surface and the bottom of a lake for cold-water trout.

The MOE lists 'algae' as the primary cause of oxygen depletion. Algae grows on the top of the lakes in the summer and sinks to the bottom when it dies, consuming the lake's available oxygen in the process.

Algae growth is largely dependent on the amount of phosphorous entering the lake naturally from subsidiaries, precipitation and erosion. A modern-day contributor, however, is the development of the shoreline. Subsurface sewage disposal systems add phosphorous to the soil which is eventually carried into the lake. And the removal of trees and shrubs, which themselves take phosphorous from the soil, allows even more phosphorous to reach the lake.

The MOE has therefore concluded that shoreline development contributes to the phosphorous supply in the lake, which in turn promotes the growth of algae, which in turn contributes to oxygen depletion, tion, which in turn reduces the amount of habitat suitable for lake trout.

All lakes respond differently to environmental stress, so the MOE does yearly tests to determine if the phosphorous and oxygen levels are consistent with lakes which are capable of producing healthy wildlife species such as trout.

The MNR has always worked with municipalities when it comes to road shore allowances. When a person arrives to buy land, the municipality gives him or her an application which is taken to county council which rubber stamps the sale. The applicant must then have a survey of the land prepared which is circulated to five agencies, one being the MNR.

The municipality then advertises the closure in the local press and posts a notice on the property. The agencies respond in writing as to whether they approve of the sale, and if so, the survey is then registered at the land registry office and sent to Municipal Affairs.

Once approved, the land transfer becomes a by-law and the municipality's solicitor prepares a deed and the property is conveyed to the landowner.

This process used to take about four months according to Jody Ainsworth, planning administrator for Dysart et al. Now, she says, there's a hitch. "We are now asking applicants to go to the Ministry before they prepare their survey."

Ainsworth says the current procedures can be frustrating. Land surveys can be costly and time-consuming, and it isn't to anyone's benefit if the municipality approves the sale, and then the Ministry disallows it on environmental grounds weeks later.

"If we knew what the MNR's policy was we wouldn't have to tell applicants to go to the Ministry first," says Ainsworth. "It's not that they've never been involved before, it's just now they're saying 'no' and we don't have a reason for why they're saying 'no'."

There is still some confusion as to why the MNR has authority over land beneath the high water mark. When the lakes were dammed years ago, the water levels of the lakes invariably changed and the amount of land under water increased. The municipalities transferred authority over this land to the MNR.

In a letter to the MNR in April, Ainsworth says: the MNR states that "where municipalities have sufficient protection for habitat in their planning documents, the MNR may not object to the stopping up, closure and sale of municipal road allowances above the high water mark. In light of our official plan policies which do not permit any buildings within 66 feet of the high water mark... please confirm in writing that our policies constitute 'sufficient protection' for the habitat". Ainsworth is still waiting for a reply.

Boland admits that the information concerning road allowances in 1989 was confusing. More information will be circulated in a few weeks which defines the MNR's policy more clearly in conjunction with the findings of the MOE, she says.

"We've gone from commenting on development to playing a more pro-active role by commenting on road allowances in the municipalities," says Boland. "As more options become available to us, legislation will evolve. And we're hoping to see a provincial fisheries policy on lake trout come out of this."

or it is winterized and serviced by a year-round road.

But in the cases where these specifics don't apply, such as older cottages on a road that cannot be plowed, Beachli encourages the buyer and seller to engage in a "vendor take-back mortgage". This means the vendor would finance the mortgage for the buyer and both parties could negotiate a set rate without dealing with the bank.

More importantly, however, there would be no need for an expensive land survey and no need to negotiate with the Ministry of Natural Resources or the municipality over who owns the 66 foot shoreline allowance.

"Most cottages are older and would be re-investing the money anyway," says Beachli, "and it's likely they are not going out to buy anything with it."

There are also situations where a purchaser feels he/she is buying the right to their lakefront and are quite surprised to find out that there is a 66 foot shoreline allowance around all Ontario lakes.

"It's a buyer beware situation," Please turn to page 5

Road allowances a concern for realtors

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

When it comes to buying shoreline allowances, realtors are often the first to hear about it from their clients. But often the realtors aren't sure of the rules, and they reluctantly send their client off to the government to get answers.

"We're never sure if you can or can't buy it," says Linda Beachli, president of the Haliburton District Real Estate Board. "Last year you could and had to, this year you can't."

But regardless of whether you own the 66 foot shoreline allowance or not, it makes no difference to the value of your real estate, says Beachli.

Where complications arise is not in transferring a title, but in a situation where someone applies for a mortgage on a property which they discover sits within the 66 foot shoreline allowance belonging to the municipality.

It is much easier to get a mortgage on a cottage now, says Beachli, if the property is considered a person's only residence,

Community policing the ticket to safety

by ED WHITE

Staff Reporter

Community policing does not just mean sticking a police officer in the community — it means the community becomes part of crime prevention and detection itself, said Staff Sergeant Bill Elliott at a meeting in Wilberforce last week.

He said the interest in the meeting — more than 50 attended — is a good augur for success. "The fact you people are here is very heart-warming in itself. You have an interest in the community."

Wilberforce's community police officer should be in place by July.

"The police service is no good without the public's input," he said, stressing that the advantage of community policing is it allows the police officer assigned to an area to become friends with people there.

Elliott related a story from Haliburton, where a group of people hired a taxi to take them to a drug store, which they robbed unbeknownst to the driver, who then drove them away.

The community police officer in Haliburton went around the village talking to people he knew, and pretty soon someone said "Hey, we had a call there the other night."

The crime was solved. A community police officer works out of an office in the assigned town, and his policing priorities are set by what the volunteer committee decides are the major crime problems in the community.

If it is speeding down the main street, he'll arrange to have a speed-trap set up. If the problem is break-and-enters, he will spend his time stopping that.

But Elliott warned people to be realistic in what they ask the officer to do. In one community the OPP questionnaire showed the biggest crime worry was loitering youths. "Old people were afraid of going to Mac's Milk because of eight or ten young lads at the corner."

He says these fears are exaggerated, created by watching news out of New York and Detroit and thinking the same conditions exist in Haliburton County.

The officer will decide how large a territory he can handle once he has set up in town. Elliott says since Wilberforce is small the officer will be responsible for the outlying areas and cottages.

One person asked whether Harcourt and Gooderham would pay some of the officer's office costs, since he might be responsible for part of their area.

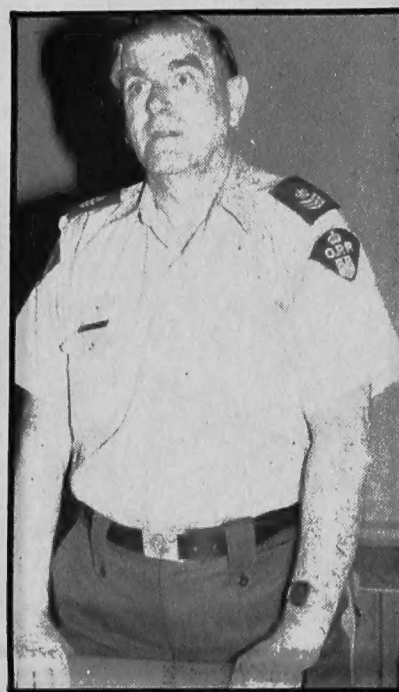

Elliott said that is up to the councils, but "townships are very jealous and greedy. Once they get a community police officer they don't want to share him."

The community the officer is stationed in has to pay for an office and phone, but all other costs are covered by the OPP.

By having an officer in the community less time is spent driving to and from Minden, Elliott said. And having the same officers in town makes them known to everyone.

"Old people there," he said of Haliburton, "drop in, shoot the breeze, they feel safe. They see him five days a week, and see him on his day off."

Elliott said community policing

Staff Sgt. Bill Elliott

makes crime-reaction time much faster. Instead of having to call Minden and wait close to an hour for a car to arrive, a police officer will be able to react immediately.

Three police officers will work in Wilberforce, one for each of the three daily shifts. But people must also take some of the responsibility. "If someone is up for a drink of water and they see someone loading a bunch of stuff in the back of a truck — get on the phone and call us. We would rather answer 99 false alarms than miss one real crime."

Closure rules change

The shoreline road allowance closure procedure should be a little faster in Anson, Hindon and Minden now that council has changed its policy.

When someone applies for closure, all neighbours must be notified and be given the opportunity to object. Previously, neighbours had to sign a declaration saying they had no objections to the closure. Sometimes the neighbours would forget to send in the form, often delaying the process for months, even years.

Now, if a neighbour does not notify the municipality within 30 days that he or she has an objection to closure, their silence will be taken as approval.

resurrection of Martin's lumber company. "I can't see it," he says. "You've got no mill, no license, just a piece of land. And who's going to pay out that much money if you can't get a timber license?"

"In this industry you have to plan a year ahead," he says, "but Martin's won't have the resources to plan and they'll be disadvantaged by those with a license who can predict how much they'll be cutting down the road."

"Once your license is gone there's not much hope, there's no way to get it back," says Coghlan. "In fact, as far as the government's concerned, it's all crown land now anyway."

Motor-sport park runs into setback

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Minden Kinsmen Club's plans to have a motor sports park near the Scotch Line landfill site might be thwarted by tough environmental rules.

The municipality owns 35 hectares zoned Waste Disposal north of the village. However, only eight acres are in use for the landfill. The other acreage is a buffer zone between the dump and Beaver Creek.

Public Works Superintendent Clayton Cameron told council on Thursday that the Ministry of the Environment is concerned that when you build something on top of land, filtration is adversely affected and may cause problems. The municipality would be responsible if anything happened to pollute the nearby area.

The Kinsmen Club is working with the Canadian Automobile Association, a race track designer and a racing association to build the park. It is a "co-operative endeavour to create a major tourism generator in our community," says Kinsmen president Jim Carrell in a letter to council.

Before making any decisions, council wants more information about the possible environmental repercussions and feasibility.

Rules affect realtors

says Beachli. Real estate companies could be guilty of not informing their clients, she says, but there is a standard clause regarding shoreline allowances that should be in any agreement of purchase and sale.

This clause states that the purchaser acknowledges that the original roadshore allowance is not closed and that building or making improvements may encroach on the said shore road allowance.

Beachli says she is not aware of any cases where people have had to move an existing building, and there was only one situation last year where a purchaser refused to close a deal when it was discovered that it did not include the lakefront property.

But Beachli says "don't shoot the messenger". It is often the case that the realtor doesn't know if the land is available for purchase or not. The MNR is not making it clear which lakes are recommended for no further development, and when realtors send their clients to the Ministry they don't often get a straight answer.

"Realtors should know because we're the ones passing on the information to the public," says Beachli. "It needs to be clear whether you can or cannot buy the roadshore allowance, and it needs to be consistent through different municipalities," she says.

"A year and a half ago developers in Minden Township were made to purchase the shoreline allowance as a requirement for purchase, but now they won't let them buy it."

This confusion will discourage people from buying in Haliburton County, says Beachli. "My feeling is that private ownership would take better care of land than public ownership. Individuals take far better care of their land than they are given credit for."

"People are aware of the need to save these lakes for the next generation, but they have to be made aware of the environmental impact more development will have."

ALWAYS THERE FOR RECREATION: After years of dedicating their time and energy to recreational programs in Anson, Hindon and Minden, Lyle McKnight and Lloyd Harrison were honoured by receiving a plaque of appreciation from the Ontario Municipal Recreation Association. The plaques were presented to them at Thursday night's council meeting by Toni Carr, who's also active with the recreation committee.

MNR workers said to throw dock in lake

The Ministry of Natural Resources went to Glamorgan council to explain how to protect lakes from pollution, but they were embarrassed to find their own workers had been throwing garbage into a lake last summer.

"I sometimes wonder — what the devil are we paying taxes for?" said Doug Potter, who lives on Glamour Lake. "Are they that concerned?"

He said MNR workers had come to the lake last year to take apart a dock, but when they finished disassembling it they threw the wood and pop cans into the lake.

Mike Belcher, the lands and parks supervisor for the MNR in Minden, said if his workers had done this they would be punished. "I guarantee you if someone was doing that we'll go out and stop them."

Community officer welcomed

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

By stationing officers in various communities, the Minden OPP detachment will be improving services rather than reducing them, says the staff sergeant.

"Anywhere it's been tried, the positive far outweighs the negative," says Bill Elliott in response to concerns that the new community policing initiative will weaken the detachment's ability to properly police the county.

The new Police Services Act says that each community must have its own officer, who will work with a local committee to solve any perceived problems and respond to calls in that area.

"It is law — it will be implemented, there's no two ways about it. I'm not disobeying the law," Sgt. Elliott says.

Previously, there would be three or four men a shift in a zone "and our zones at present are immense," he adds. "There's no real dedication of time to that zone so they wander a lot."

In the cold winter months, for example, "Highway 35 near Dorset is not exactly a thrill a minute and it's not busy." Officers will therefore likely congregate around the larger villages, leaving no one in the north. "To me that is not a correct deployment when all three men (on shift) are all in one area."

Or one policeman may respond to a call in one community, and not return there for weeks, depending on scheduling.

Now an officer volunteers to be based in a certain community and over time, becomes more familiar with its needs and sources of concern. Both the community and police benefit from the improved police profile.

Above all, however, emergencies take precedence over community policing matters, Sgt. Elliott stresses. "If a bus overturns five miles down the road, that's where (Haliburton officer Ron Buchanan) will be," not talking with downtown merchants about shoplifting. Recently, several officers were called to help at the truckers' blockade on Highway 401.

If there are manpower problems with community policing, Sgt. Elliott says "it's something we have to work with later. I would suggest everywhere you look there's some shortage but the work eventually gets done."

OPP office in the works

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Minden Community Policing Committee is finalizing plans for a small office on the main street, in hopes that when the tenders come in, council will provide the approximately $22,000 for construction costs.

"The contractors aren't busy and might be willing to sharpen their pencils," committee chairman Doug Campbell told council Thursday night. The 20' by 24' building would be behind the Bank of Commerce, on property owned

EDITORIAL

Who owns it?

One needn't look very far to find evidence of Haliburton's greatest strength. Thanks to the glaciers thousands of years ago, every 10 kilometres or so there's a lake. In the summer time, when so many things seem to close in around us, lakes free our minds and spirits. Whether for peace or recreation, lakes provide us with escape. The more we look around us, as our cities spread outward and people discover the area's beauty, the more we become aware of our need to protect our tourism asset. Most people have good intentions and would never do something to harm the lake. But not everyone has a university degree which tells them that if you alter your shoreline, you destroy valuable fish habitats. And if you destroy habitats, you destroy populations of a myriad of species, plant and animal. The Ministry of Natural Resources is doing an admirable job in helping people realize every action can have a detrimental consequence. The Ministry is also there for the small percentage of people who don't care about the long-term affects of their actions. Rules have been put in place to stop the harm before it even happens.

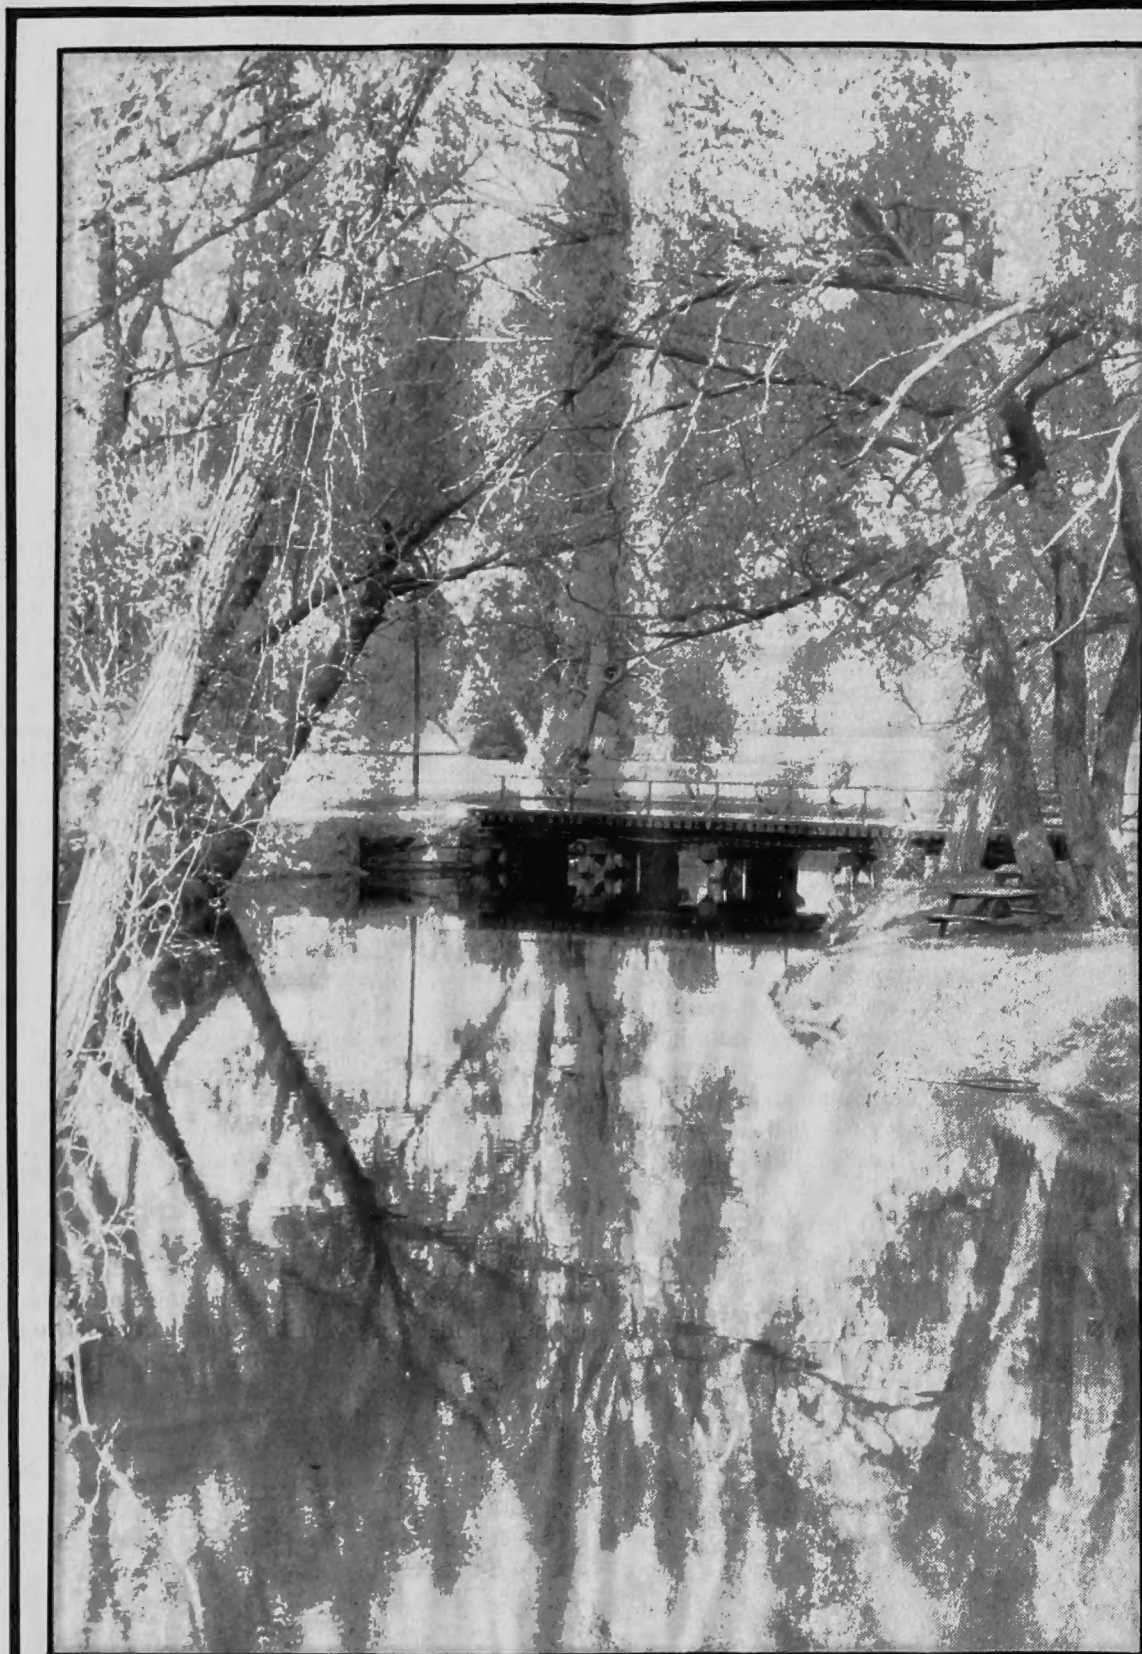

Yet the Ministry has to realize this is a shared responsibility, and that yes indeed, most people act responsibly. When explained to them, they willingly agree to follow the rules about shoreline improvements; to a certain extent, the Ministry knows best. But when it comes to decreeing who can buy their 66' shoreline allowance and who can't, the Ministry is taking its powers too far.

Around every lake, the municipality owns a 66-foot strip of shoreline, should it ever want to build a road. Today, everyone knows you would never put a transport route around a lake, so municipalities have had few qualms in selling this land, providing that all neighbours are in agreement. The purchase of shoreline allowances has never been a big deal until recently: people worry more about their dwindling privacy and want to establish ownership beyond the shadow of a doubt. Although lawyers bicker about how much legal authority an owner has, a person who owns lakefront property has "care and control" of the 66 feet. If someone is trespassing on your beach, whether you own the shoreline allowance or not, you have the authority to ask them to leave. The 66 feet is not one long, public beach ringing every lake.

In many enlightened municipalities, there are strict rules governing what you can do on that land — nothing, as far as building is concerned. But now the Ministry is saying that on lakes where lake trout are at risk, no one can buy their shoreline allowance. Yet the Ministry has not been clear on its reasons why. The underlying question is What difference does it make who owns the allowance? Whether a person owns it or not, they're still getting full use and enjoyment from the strip of land. There are still rules governing what people can do with their shoreline. There are still restrictions on building. Why then should the Ministry care whether the landowner owns the 66 feet or the municipality? The land is being used in exactly the same way.

Perhaps the answer lies in jurisdiction. If someone puts a crib dock on their shoreline, the Ministry can tell the municipality to order the person to remove it, because after all, it is municipal property. If the person owns it, enforcement is now the Ministry's responsibility. That responsibility carries with it some costs the Ministry obviously doesn't want to pay — costs the municipality is only too glad to get rid of. As well, in these court happy days, the municipality wants to wash its hands of any potential liability.

The Ministry says it can block purchases because it is a neighbour with a right to object. Under the Municipal Act, however, their objection carries no more weight than a next-door neighbour's. No where has the Ministry been given authority to squash purchases on entire lakes; it just seems to be hoping no one notices that small, inconsequential detail.M.P.

Games and alcohol don't mix

MORE LETTERS FROM ECHO READERS...

To the Editor:

On visiting a cottage in your area last week-end, I noticed the banner across your main street advertising the forthcoming Highland Games.

I also could not miss noticing that an alcoholic beverage manufacturer sponsored the banner.

The Haliburton Highlands has the highest ratio of alcoholics in the province of Ontario, stands second in Canada only behind the N.W.T. and the major social problem in the Highlands is alcohol and drug addiction.

With this in mind it seems odd that someone would approach a liquor company to supply this banner, hopefully for all to see. Either the Game organizers are not tuned in to the social problems of the community, couldn't care less or haven't the imagination to properly solve the problem of advertising. Try having your local businesses chip in for a permanent banner with pockets for changeable letters to be erected to promote all events year round.

Being in the healthcare field I say to you that to have a liquor company sponsored sign hang over public property in an area where alcohol is the number one social problem leaves something to be desired. May I suggest new organizers for the Games.

Lorna Van Mossel,
Kitchener.

No help for Doghope

To the Editor:

I note with interest your article in last week's paper about Stanhope (Dogpatch) Township, enacting a law to immediately let By-law Officer Jim Moore issue a warning if anyone's yard is a little messy, so the Council can improve its image.

My observation of Mr. Moore in the past has been that his ears can't determine when a barking dog is loud enough to interfere with the enjoyment of property without resorting to an expensive decibel recording machine to enforce the by-law) thereby he claims their present by-law is not enforceable.

Now I wonder how he will determine if a yard is messy enough to issue his warning (perhaps he'll borrow an expensive telescope from some observatory to make his determination).

If Mr. Moore's eyes aren't any better than his ears have been in the past, then his job won't change too much in the future, and Council's image will remain where it is!

I think if most people in Doghope/Dogpatch township had a choice, they'd sooner look at an old car or a farmer's machinery than listen to an unattended dog bark 24 hours a day!

From one who knows.

Bill Hamilton,
Stanhope Township.

POINTS OF VIEW

Smoking now a dying habit?

IF YOU'RE AMONG THE one-in-three Canadians over 15 who still smoke, and you're accustomed to using the handy dandy calendar or memo space on the back of the slide inside your pack, look out...

It seems that the cigarette companies are going to turn that portion of the package into anti-government propaganda. They want to make it a postage-free card smokers can sign and mail to the Prime Minister, complaining about the federal tax on smokes.

Curiously, they apparently don't plan a version to send to Bob Rae, whose government has also done its bit to raise sin taxes and, in fact, even went so far as to predict the number of lives they believe they will help save in the process.

"It has been estimated that each year tobacco-induced diseases cause 13,000 premature deaths in Ontario. It is expected that this (last) tax increase, when combined with the federal 3-cent increase, will result in a decline in tobacco consumption by between 4 and 9 per cent," according to Ontario treasurer Floyd Laughren in his budget announcement.

Together with the recognition of the cancer link by more Canadians, and stricter advertising and promotion rules for advertising their products, cigarette makers saw a drop of nearly 20% in sales between February of 1990 and '91.

On a per capita basis, cigarette smoking is falling faster in Canada than in the U.S., where their tobacco lobbyists have had more luck at fighting off government control — in the best congress that money can buy...

Sales continue to fall dramatically in the U.S. as well, however, and one of the U.S. manufacturers' ploys has been to concentrate on the exporting of their brands to the Asian market, primarily Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore and South Korea, all of whom have a great admiration for things American.

Interestingly enough, right here in Haliburton, the previous brands of children's candy cigarettes — Popeye, and the like — have been completely replaced by versions that feature American brand names. I really don't think they should be selling such a thing as candy cigarettes anywhere, do you?

One of the more courageous moves in taking a position on smoking and health has been the vote by the Ontario College of Pharmacists last fall to prohibit tobacco sales in drug stores "as quickly as it is practical to do so."

Response to this move has caused such an overwhelming response — from the public as well as business interests — that the committee trying to implement the resolution has been delayed and aren't likely to report their proposals until next month.

We should be proud of the fact that none of the drug stores in Haliburton or Minden sell cigarettes, and they had all made that choice before this motion was passed. It is a real case of putting their money where their mouth is, because they are giving up a profit for a principle.

One of the ironic problems for the College of Pharmacists in making this move is the fact that Imperial Tobacco, in an effort to diversify their corporate wealth in the light of declining tobacco sales a few years ago, led them to buy the Shopper's Drug Mart chain.

How would you like to have the moral struggle of being a pharmacist for this successful outfit, trying to justify the corporate position, knowing full well that their product kills more people every week than AIDS, suicides, and traffic accidents combined?

In Oregon, for the past few years, doctors have been asked to fill in a line on each death certificate under "Did tobacco use contribute to this death?" by checking boxes for "yes," "no," "probably," or "unknown."

That is also the state where they are proposing to cut medical expenses by evaluating whether the patient has contributed to his own problems by not taking care of himself.

When bed spaces and operating rooms are scarce, and there aren't enough surgeons to go around, they propose that overweight people with heart conditions, drinkers with liver conditions, and smokers with lung cancer may just have to wait their turn — behind other patients who need help and have been taking care of themselves.

All we can hope for is that, as all these negative factors pile up, more people will stop smoking to save their own lives...

PIC OF THE PAST

You are looking at the boom of logs and floating camp, in Pine Cove Bay on the Old Allsaw road in the year of 1925. The fields in the background are now a heavily, reforested area of red pine. Highway 121 runs across the top, at the skyline and is known as the Allsaw Flats. These logs were headed for Haliburton, towed by paddle wheel steam boat. Photo and information courtesy of Murray Robertson, RR1, Minden.

People reshaping the earth

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

MY GIRLFRIEND AND I were chatting the other day, and she was bemoaning the fact that the nice wood lot next to her was about to have a house built on it. She said, it wasn't so much that she would lose some privacy, as the fact that the owner had told the builder to bulldoze all the trees and BURY them. (They would spoil her view.) But why bury them? I suppose she would not be opting for wood heat. But to be so wasteful and selfish as to not even give the logs away. It just makes me wonder how some people's minds work, if they do at all.

The woman obviously wanted a view of the lake uncluttered by trees. Odds are, she will eventually call in some high class landscaper who will set out a few geometrically correct bushes and orderly flowers in well-fertilized topsoil that will be brought in to replace all the wonderfully mulched loam that eroded into the lake when there were no trees left to hold it.

I know just how my friend feels. There is a lot much like it between us and West Guilford. After ripping out a small, lovely woods, the owners went so far as to reshape the earth to create their own version of a house on a hill. They had to re-enforce their creation with railroad ties. Then, they planted a very straight line of spindly, young trees in front of this place, so that in twenty-five years or so, they can have some privacy.

The reason I bring this up, is that in last week's Echo, here was an article about the realtors trying to improve their image. It's not a bad idea. Just like there are good and bad salesmen and lawyers, sometimes it makes me cringe when I see what happens after some big deals come off in real estate. Yes, I agree that education, plus a code of ethics would be a step in the right direction. But, I think the realtors of the Highlands, and all places like this, have a greater responsibility.

If one counts the number of realtors listed in the back pages of the local papers it is amazing if not questionable. Why are there so many? Are some of them out to make the fast bucks at the expense of our beautiful countryside and its environment? How many is too many? There are many conscientious realtors in Haliburton. They must have a strong voice. A voice that could do something to maintain a particular quality of life that the natural things around us can live with.

There are many communities that have established environmental protection codes for lot sales. The purchaser buys with the understanding that, for instance, they must leave 50 percent of the trees standing. When putting lake lots up for sale, realtors could agree to leave 30 percent to 40 percent of the frontage intact, for the preservation of the wildlife who were there first. Finally, all wetlands should really be taken off the market and preserved as unique eco-systems.

Progress is inevitable. But with the help of the realtors, who are the middle-people, Haliburton could choose to grow sensibly, without losing the charm that has drawn so many people (including us) here in the first place. None of us wants Haliburton to become another noisy, paved suburb with no natural vistas, no wildlife, and maybe even no palatable water.

Perhaps my ideas are radical. But if you think so, consider California where people frequently find the redwood decks of their cliffside home sticking out of mudslides. Or sit on their redwood chairs, on sun-scorched hills overlooking the great Los Angeles Freeway, and the paved countryside wondering why there is literally no more water.

Let's help the Chamber

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

by: SHAWN HAGERMAN

THIS HAS BEEN a busy month as the Chamber regroups under the difficulties caused by County's decision to reduce our funding by half. At a Board meeting May 22 several important issues and strategies were implemented.

June is going to be Membership Month. An effort will be made by directors to contact all members, review any questions about the existing situation and ask for a voluntary, additional membership contribution above your regular dues. Anything you could contribute would be welcome, but if everyone gave $50, it would help secure the second staff and give us some operating room. Also, if you would like to sponsor an event, [i.e. the circus, or a business after hours], work on a committee or become a board member, now is the time to come forward. As people in business, the Chamber's ultimate success rests with us. We need your help to continue to make our voice heard. It is also a good time to pay your dues since they must be paid by June 30. To continue your membership. Welcome your director when they call. They are volunteering their time to make our Chamber work.

Curtis Eastmure also has reserved space for our Chamber to attend the important Snowmobile Show in the fall. However the only way we can go is if enough members participate. It has to self-liquidate. Also our booth has been made available to individuals on a fee basis for their needing a booth. It is felt this would be a good way to get our booth and brochures out to shows without the Chamber incurring any direct cost. Contact the Chamber office for details on the booth and the snowmobile Show.

What if monsters caught?

they dangerous? They may be small or mini now but if they avoid recapture by John Batt they will obviously grow bigger. I have read reports of the Loch Ness monster reaching over 60 feet in length. THAT SCARES ME.

I live on Green Lake in West Guilford and keep my eye out for monsters now ever since you began printing these reports. If these monsters can move overland they may come to my lake. Is there a government department that I can write to for further information?

Then there is this hound creature. I have not heard it personally as we live outside of Haliburton but again I am concerned if the hound should decide to move. Someone must be responsible. I wish John Batt all the best in his efforts to capture these monsters. I shall certainly attend the Haliburton Highland Games on June 22nd to see if he has been successful. It sounds as though the organizing committee have a good day planned this year.

George Martin,

Concerns shared

Editor's Note: This letter was written to Andy Hillo, the owner of Sandy Acres who wrote a report about development on Elephant Lake. Mr. Hillo wanted development to cease.

Dear Mr. Hillo:

We have a situation in the northernmost reaches of Baptiste lake and the York River, which adjoins your area, that is very similar to the one on Elephant Lake. The lake and river there in Herschel are very shallow, abound in animal and plant species that thrive in wetland areas, and the adjacent land is not developed yet, but the pressure is on to do so. Together with the Elephant Lake-York River area you describe, it is one of the truly beautiful and unspoiled waterway/wetland niches left in this part of Southern Ontario. In my view, it would be a gross violation of both nature and the long term interests of humans to see such an area developed.

You have described some of the relevant impacts of development in these types of areas from the environmental viewpoint better than I could have. However, I would like to reinforce the view that such development would significantly reduce economic prosperity of our whole North Hastings-Haliburton district in the long term, by despoilment of one more of the very features that make the area most attractive to both part-time and permanent residents that use or appreciate the Elephant/Benoir/Baptiste waterways, and to the true tourist visitors we can attract. And those part-time and permanent residents and visitors have been shown to be, and will continue to be, an economic mainstay of the district over the long haul. That is, as long as we treat them right and don't make a mess of the areas that most interest them by allowing inappropriate development.

In other words, allowing development in the areas that are the most attractive natural features we have is akin to, bit by bit, killing the goose that laid the golden egg. In these types of causes, however, you won't know that for a certainty until it had already happened; but, you can't go back and undo the damage afterward. Therefore, development in these

by DONNA-LEE SISSON

SO MANY TIMES it seems like there's nothing we can do to improve the injustices of this world, or there's no point in even trying. This time I've decided to do something, even if making you think about yourself, and more importantly others, is all that is accomplished.

Last evening my sister and I were shopping in a large department store with someone who is very special to me. She happens to be a "wheelchair-driver". (You may think she drives one of those handicapped vehicles — that's a bus with squeaky seats or the flat tire missing right? If you do, then you're misled.) "Wheelchair-driver" is a term I coined myself; it's kinder than saying "confined to a wheelchair" which basks in negative connotations. A wheelchair never confines; it brings freedom an offers independence, which is just the opposite.

To get back to my story . . . After a prolonged visit in the ladies department. (you see, there's rarely enough room to pass between racks in a chair, and when something catches your eye and you manage to get to it after hard labor, chances are that you'll not be able to reach high enough to check the tag or take a closer look!) we took our purchases to the check-out. After "standing" in line for five minutes, we noticed the steep-post railing alongside the counter, just an arm-rest width too narrow for safe passage. With exhausted exasperation I walked the length of the ten tills looking for an alternate plan. Weaving my way through the crowd, something that the power chair couldn't have maneuvered, I discovered a check-out with a LARGE wheelchair sign hanging above it. My delight in the discovery was short-lived because it was missing an important element: a cashier. I spotted an important-looking gentleman whom I chased around the check-out area. When I finally caught him, (fortunately I was wearing running shoes) I calmly inquired about this "special designed" check-out. Not only was it unstaffed, there wasn't a cash tray for it. It became obvious that they had no intention of using this desk, but the big sign sure looked nice and I'm sure that it had lured in many other unsuspecting shoppers

Brothers breaking the dumb jock image

Robinson boys prove mettle on the gridiron

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

THE WORD OUT on university football fields these days is that the guys from Haliburton really hit hard. At least that's what Paul Robinson says, and he should know. He and his brother Mark, both HHSS graduates, now play on university football teams and they're up against the toughest of the tough in Canada's university football circuit.

"For four months you have a headache," says Paul, a 20-year-old defensive tackle at the University of Waterloo, home for the weekend. "And as long as you have a headache you know you're healthy," he says wryly.

There are whirlpools with ice water at the recreation centre at Waterloo and about 80 players line up for a chance to ice their shins every night during training camp.

Welcome to one of the first rules of competitive football: one must learn very quickly to overcome "every-day injuries" such as sprained ankles, bruised knees or perpetual shin splints — or one risks not playing the game at all.

"Especially if you're a rookie, if you go to the team doctor and say you've been hurt, you could find out you're out for the season," says Paul.

"You have to put up with a certain amount of injury, because if you stopped with every cut or bruise you would never play," says 19-year-old brother Mark, an offensive tackle and Rookie of the Year at Queen's University.

Welcome to another instinctive rule in football: be able to overpower your opponent before they overpower you. This might help to explain why Paul weighs 240 pounds and can bench-press 300 pounds at the end of the season, and Mark is 300 pounds and can bench-press 350 pounds. It's a simple case of being able to hit hard or being hard hit.

And another necessary ingredient for the makings of a successful competitive football player? Commitment. Training camp arrives in the last week in August each year, and involves two to three practices for two and a half hours each day for 14 to 16 days. "The first couple of days aren't so bad, but when the injuries build up, you just don't want to get out of bed," says Mark.

But if all this talk perhaps leads an innocent observer into believing football is a game for either machos or masochists, Mark and Paul are quick to dispell certain stereotypes associated with those who play the game, and they will even reveal its pleasures beyond the inevitable injuries.

For instance, what about the notion that all football players are dumb jocks? Well, in academics, the Robinsons' records are impressive. Mark was an Ontario scholar coming out of high school and both are working towards degrees at university, Mark in civil engineering and Paul in history.

And to stay on the football team, players must keep up with the course loads in their respective programs. "There's an awful lot of pressure at Queen's where academics are stressed over athletics," says Mark, who made the Dean's Honour List with his above-80 average. "If you drop a course in first year, you'll end up having three more years of a mixed up timetable."

"As long as the coach doesn't hear from the dean or from your professors that you're missing class or you're getting low marks then you'll be alright," says Paul. "A lot of guys will take four classes a year instead of five and they'll stretch out their stay at university from four years to five." This strategy can be very appealing to those who enjoy football as much as they do classes.

But football is an education in itself, as any university player will tell you. "It gives you a good mental attitude for decision-making and dealing with stress," says Mark. "There's so much stress in those four months that it makes the other things in life seem easier."

The game itself is also mentally demanding. The offensive memorizes up to 50 plays and the quarter back says two numbers and players must picture and execute it, says Paul. "You also have to be in touch with the guy beside you or you're in real trouble," says Mark. "To be on the offensive you have to learn to be totally psyched for 30 seconds and then totally calm. And the defensive line has to be up all the time."

The Robinsons credit their football skills to their high school days under coach Gary Brohman. It is at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School that they first developed a strong commitment to training. "The finesse might not have been there, but wanting to hit was," says Paul.

"Paul was a scrawny kid to begin with," says Brohman, "and although he wasn't physically tough, he always had the mental toughness." Paul developed his physical strength in Grade 11, says Brohman, and he won the trophy for most defensive points in OAC (Grade 13.)

"Mark was always a big kid," says Brohman. "And he came off the field only to get a drink. He has all the physical and mental attributes for university and the pros. I've always said if Mark Robinson decides to play CFL football, he'll play CFL."

Brohman coaches the football team at HHSS in the image of his mentor from his days at Sir Wilfred Laurier University. Coach Tuffy Knight now coaches Paul at the University of Waterloo. "He stressed the fundamentals," says Brohman. "He'd say, 'Bro, you've got to know how to block and tackle before you can score a touchdown.' "Like all good houses you need a good foundation, and we emphasize fundamentals and skill development. Kids with good calibre and good coaching will put you in good stead at university."

"Football is only one part of your whole make-up," adds Brohman, who played for Laurier University in the late Sixties. "But it's such a large part of your life at university because you think and breathe it."

Coach Brohman is also a believer in the "male bonding" process that takes place in a game like football. In his vice-principal's office at HHSS he says he has tried not to have too much football paraphernalia, but the evidence is there: 8x10s of some of the high school's best players such as Mark Robinson, framed photos of the teams he has coached since he arrived at HHSS in 1972.

Football building more than muscle for local brothers and a coffee mug that reads 'Old football players never die they just go off-side'.

"If the boys were here right now we'd spend all day talking about football," he says, his mind flooded with memories as he looks at the photographs on his shelves. "Football builds friendships, camaraderie, and it's all done because you practice more than you play," says Brohman.

The Robinsons would agree. "You're with a bunch of guys going through a lot of hardships and you sit around the locker room afterwards and talk about it," says Paul. Besides, "friends tease you if you want to quit," he says. "Once you're in, you can't get out unless you move away."

And like all dedicated football players, the Robinsons' attention to the game is year-round.

"Football builds friendship, camaraderie," says the brothers former coach Gary Brohman.

Both have just completed their winter workout programs to keep their muscles and cardiovascular systems conditioned for fall training camp. Training also keeps on the weight which is critical if you want to be taken seriously in the game.

"I was only 200 pounds in high school," says Paul, "and it took me two years to put on 40 pounds. By next week I could be down to 230 if I don't watch it." Using a diet plan, along with weight training and exercise, the Robinsons have learned how to keep on the pounds needed to blend in with their heavy-weight contenders on the football field.

And what about steroid use in university football? "It's pretty knocked down," says Mark. "There's a lot at stake if you get caught." The rules state that any player caught using steroids or any drug that is performance enhancing, (surprisingly this includes Tylenol and many cough medicines) has the option to retire for one year or to be suspended for a year. If that same player is caught again, he is suspended from playing competitively for life.

Neither of the Robinsons have been tested for steroids use but eight people were tested on Paul's team at Waterloo last year. "All the testing is done randomly, every player has a number and they test you anytime during the year. After every major play-off game they take about four people and test them."

"If you do take some of the stuff that's restricted, like cough medicine, they'll be a lot more understanding if you tell them before it shows up in tests."

Coach Brohman believes there was high steroid use in university football in the late 1960s and early 1970s. "I think it's always been there for people who wanted to use it like weight-lifting freaks who aren't just involved in the game but are ego-centric about how much weight they can lift. Kids are stronger than they were 20 years ago at the high school level and it has nothing to do with drugs."

Coaches and players are more aware of training techniques and of what weight lifting and proper diet can do, says Brohman. Today, he says, accomplishment is measured by tremendous guts, tenacity and a love for the sport. "Who in their right mind would play in the muck and rain and bounce off each other if they didn't love the sport?" he asks.

As for the Robinsons, there's no doubt the sport is in their blood. "It's addictive," says Mark. "You have a hard time watching without playing."

"There's a sense of satisfaction when you do well, when you run somebody over, when you've just annihilated this guy," Paul says with a chuckle.

"As soon as the leaves start to turn you get that urge," he says. So look out world — here come the Robinsons to a football field near you this Fall!

complete with their chairs, sticks, walkers and white canes (the big sign would be sure to catch their eye). Yes the big sign probably drew them.

The manager then ushered us to another line-up, this time at the end of the counter. The cashier was pleasant and promised to wait on us momentarily. As we waited, other customers rammed their parts past, not caring whether they collided with the wheelchair or not. My ever-patient companion silently cringed with each bump and smiled through her now nagging pain. The cashier turned her attention to us and began to ring through the items. As she did so, she politely commented to the customer waiting next that she'd be just a moment, ending with "you don't mind do you?" The self-centered, able-bodied, inconsiderate person insensitively replied "Yes I do mind". Just then, another cashier came to help bag merchandise, positioning herself between the counter and the wheelchair, adding another hip check to the growing number of assaults, and blocking our view of the cash register and the items being purchased. I can't tell you what happened next because I left the store, unable to contain my anger, retreating to the parking lot. My sister stayed until the end of the transaction. I assume the bagger moved in time to collect the cash — after all, this is what customer service is all about isn't it?

At the time I was furious; I still am. Later in the evening as I replayed the events in my mind I became very sad. Sad because the most courageous women I know had been insulted and ignored, was denied dignity and equality, and was treated like a person without worth. As I thought about it, the tears flowed freely as I realized that my broken heart was only half as tragic as her broken spirit.

Please don't be the one who robs someone else of this rightful place in society. Think before you speak, maybe hold a door, leave them their parking spaces, and smile when you pass a physically-challenged person on the street. Together we can make accessibility happen!

Costs and health give smokers reason to quit

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The World Health Organization has deemed this Friday World No-Tobacco Day as a way of raising the public's awareness of the risks associated with smoking. Eighty per cent of deaths from lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and emphysema are smoking related.

But despite numerous medical warnings and rising tobacco prices, Ontario has the highest concentration of smokers in Canada. From 1984 to 1987 Ontarians bought two per cent more cigarettes per person, while the rest of Canada bought 23 per cent fewer. Each year about 13,400 people die in Ontario as a result of smoking.

And each year approximately 3,750 young people in Ontario begin smoking. Most learn from example, which has had some smokers reconsidering their expensive habit.

"Both my husband and I never smoke around our daughter," says one 35-year-old woman, who didn't want her name used, polled on Haliburton's main street. She began smoking at the age of 15 and has since attempted to quit several times.

"I'm considering quitting right now, but it takes time to prepare for it. Once you stop, you can never lose that craving for it," she says.

The process a smoker must go through to quit is similar to what a drug addict faces, and consultation from the family doctor is often recommended. "Nicotine is just as addictive as heroin or cocaine. It fills a psychological need and your body lets you know when it's not satisfied," says Dr. Karl Hartwick of the Family Medical Centre in Haliburton. Common characteristics of tobacco withdrawal include anxiety, irritability and insomnia.

But over the last few years Dr. Hartwick has noticed more smokers are looking for ways to stop. Although health is a major concern, more than often it's the financial aspect which proves to be an even bigger incentive to "butt-out".

"We always seem to get a blip of people whenever the price of cigarettes goes up," says Dr. Hartwick. The average price for a large package of cigarettes can vary between retailers, but the majority are more than $6. (Approximately $4.38 of that is tax.)

Regardless of price, some retailers insist it's business as usual. "We're getting just as many people as we did before," says Marcel Denis, owner of Mike's Milk in Haliburton. Denis, a smoker himself for 35 years, jokes higher prices almost make people want to buy more just out of spite towards the governments' endless taxation.

"It's just gone up like everything else," says one 62-year-old man who has smoked on and off for the last 30 years, and recently lighted up again. He doesn't want to reveal his name in case it gets back to his doctor. "I know it's bad, but I'm too old to care," he laughs.

Price isn't a consideration for him, but it has been for the aforementioned smoker. "With the price being the way it is both my husband and I are considering stopping," she says.

She does however, feel she could stop for one day and promises to do so in honour of World No-Tobacco Day.

MMA gives $10,000 for OP

Although the 1991 county budget includes a $70,000 grant from the Ministry of Municipal Affairs to help pay costs of developing the county's Official Plan, the ministry has said only $10,000 will be forthcoming this year.

"It won't affect the budget," says Chief Administrative Officer Gary McKnight. Most of the grant money was to pay for outside consultants' fees, but now the consultants won't be hired this year so the money won't be spent.

For the past few months, county Planner Mark Stagg has been working on draft interim plans for the seven local municipalities which do not have their own OPs. However, the ministry recently said it does not approve of interim plans so now Stagg will be concentrating on the first phase of drafting the county OP.

SWEARING IN: He's not a new face at Anson, Hindon and Minden council, and on Thursday night, Verne Graham completed the familiar exercise of being sworn in as councillor. The former councillor is replacing councillor Mike Maher, who became the deputy-reeve after deputy-reeve Bern Berry became reeve when reeve Ray Moore resigned earlier this month because of health problems.

Three 'scars' to be cleaned up

Owners of the three "scars" on Minden's Bobcaygeon Road will be asked to clean up their property.

The three excavation sites are along the main commercial route and owners had dug the holes in preparation for construction of commercial buildings. However, construction has not started on any of the sites.

At Thursday's council meeting, Councillor Verne Graham proposed that the by-law enforcement officer ask the owners to clean up and landscape the properties.

"If they're not interested, we should proceed to do the work and charge them," Graham says, referring to a fairly recent by-law which says that if an excavation site isn't developed within 60 days, it must be restored by the owner.

Legion's request for tax freeze is denied

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Because the Minden Legion is a gathering place for people other than veterans, and council cannot make financial decisions for future councils, the Legion's request for a 10-year hiatus in property taxes has been turned down.

However, in recognition of the valuable role the Legion plays in the community, council has changed the assessment on the Legion's Highway 35 building from commercial to residential. This means a savings of at least $2,800 a year in taxes.

The Ontario Municipal Act says that a club house used by persons who served in the armed forces may be exempt from the municipal share of property taxes for a maximum of 10 years. Although it does not want the exemption now, the Legion has heard the privilege may be revoked and asked council to pass a resolution allowing the exemption in the future. In the next decade, debentures for the building will have to be paid off and building might have to be expanded, putting the Legion in need of by the municipality. "It's not gold-plated but it will be a credit to the community."

"I appreciate your groundwork but $22,000 in a year when we'll be having a lot of difficulty" makes the proposal seem costly, said Reeve Bern Berry. "You feel we should raise the tax base $22,000, plus pay for heating and utilities?"

The OPP will spend about $70,000 to station one officer in the village, as part of the new Police Services Act, Campbell said. The community is obligated to pay for the office and its costs.

"We need this desperately," said Jerry Jordan, a downtown businessman. "It is a lot of money but we've got to do something and the location is excellent. . . If the police are coming to us for co-operation, it's ludicrous not to accept it. They're actually looking at the prevention of crime. Finally we have a policeman's ear. Let's prevent the break-ins."

"I never realized I was such a bad guy," said Deputy-reeve Mike Maher, a retired Minden OPP officer.

"Yesterday's child is not today's child," said Jordan. "Let's change with the times. We've got to pull our share."

"Whether we like it or not, and we should like it, it's giving extra protection to the community," said Councillor Lewis Stevens. "We have to assure people they can do their shopping in peace. If it costs $20,000 to facilitate a service like that, that should be a small price to pay."

The committee has looked at available downtown rental space, but at $400 to $1,000 a month, felt renting was too expensive, Campbell said. The municipality has offered free use of space in the firehall, but Campbell says the firehall is 400 metres too far from Main Street.

"We want to get the doors open," said Maher.

beautiful, sensitive areas should not be allowed in the first place.

I hope those in more influential situations than myself will also take up the cause you have brought to our attention, we can get some meaningful and permanent conservation action in both the Elephant lake and Baptiste Lake areas before it's too late. In this regard, support for a movement to save irreplaceable natural features throughout the whole

North Hastings-Haliburton area would also be appropriate.

Public Notice of a

PRESCRIBED BURN

During late May or early June, the Ministry of Natural Resources will be conducting a prescribed burn on three parcels of Crown land in Stanhope Township, totalling 45 hectares. The location is approximately 3 km south of Ox Narrows and 1 km West of Kushog Lake, as shown on the map below. The exact date of the burn will depend on suitable weather conditions and any northern fire-fighting assignments for the Haliburton Fire Centre crews.

If you observe smoke or helicopter activity in the area of this prescribed burn during this period, please do not drive to the site for a closer look. Access to the burn site will be sealed, and the fire will not be visible from the Kushog Lake Road. Curious on-lookers will only block traffic on the Kushog Lake Road and impede the movements of the MNR fire crew. You will be welcome to view the site after the fire has been extinguished.

The purpose of this prescribed burn is to prepare a recent cutover for the planting of 60,000 white pine in the spring of 1992. Prescribed burns like this provide the closest approximation of the wildfire conditions under which white pine regenerates in nature. For more information on this prescribed burn or on other forestry activities in this area, please contact Peter Hynard of the MNR Minden Office at 286-1521. (Please do not call on the day of the burn, as MNR staff will be occupied at the burn site.)

Youth corps fixes trails

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

As summer quickly approaches, thoughts of boating and swimming fill the mind. But strangely enough, cross-country skiing is what's on the mind of the Haliburton Nordic Trails Association members as they prepare to upgrade trails for next winter.

Working with the Ministry of Environment, the HNTA has set up an Environmental Youth Corps to spruce up sections of the county's 200 km of trails.

"The program will be environmentally friendly. We won't hack down trees," says its coordinator Paul Jackson.

Including himself, a crew of eight young people between the ages of 18 and 24 will prune areas along the trails, and in some cases will straighten out sharp bends to make them easier for the groomers. The group will also add colour-coded markers and attempt to produce an updated trail map.

"This will be done with enough care so that the soil won't be damaged. We'll also re-plant trees and keep the large unique ones," says Jackson.

Three areas have been chosen for upgrading. They include the 21 km of trails near the Leslie M. Frost Centre, the trails through Glebe Park in Haliburton, and select portions on the 15 km of trails between Minden and Haliburton.

Jackson has hired two people from outside of the county, but would like the remainder of the crew to be local. "Hopefully we'll get people who'll pursue a career in the outdoors, and aren't afraid of blackflies," says Jackson, a geological engineer who's ground-skeeper for the PineStone Inn.

The 10-week project begins June 10 and will end in August. But before heading into the bush, the crew will be given detailed instruction by the Ministry of Natural Resources on the proper use of chainsaws and machetes.

Although the job will not pay very much, Jackson expects many will apply for the available positions because of the practical experience the program provides.

Paul Jackson
leads crew

Besides pruning trees, the group will also construct several ski kiosks and bridges over low-lying swampy areas. "There is emphasis on few," jokes Jackson, referring to the boardwalk-style bridges.

If you're interested in applying for a position, please send a resume addressed to Paul Jackson c/o of The Haliburton Nordic Trails Association, Box 670, Haliburton, Ontario, K0M 1S0 or phone 457-1640.

Government plan could magnify welfare costs

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

If all the recommendations of the province's Back on Track plan were carried through, municipal governments will find their welfare costs even more burdensome, county council agreed Wednesday.

"We can't afford it," said Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Bern Berry in his social services committee report. "We feel it would put us in a very bad financial position."

He proposed a motion telling the province that money for the program — which was commissioned by the previous Liberal government — would be better spent fighting the deficit. Before voting on it, Reeve Bill Davis asked for more information. Morris Honeyman, director of the county's social services department, was asked to speak to council a few minutes later.

There are 88 recommendations, Honeyman said, six of which to be implemented by August 1. Under the plan and in conjunction with other new policies, "two people earning minimum wage would qualify for general welfare and that would be a cost factor in this county."

The program would top up monies received by low income families.

Provincial funding to the county will increase to 90 per cent from 80 per cent if the caseload exceeds 3.5 per cent of the general population for four consecutive months. Only the portion above 3.5 per cent will receive the 90 per cent funding.

It looks good on paper, Honeyman says, but although the county did exceed the 3.5 for three months, the figures will probably go down for the summer, and the county won't qualify for assistance.

As well, although it won't be too much of an issue in Haliburton County, general welfare applications must be provided in several languages.

The changes will be discussed at a conference Honeyman is attending May 29. "Make sure the changes benefit the municipalities as well as the recipients," Berry said.

Legion not exempted

financial assistance.

No other municipality in Ontario is granting the exemption, said Councillor Verne Graham. (Monmouth reduced the Wilberforce Legion's taxes by $500 for 1991. It was the Wilberforce Legion which told Minden Legion of the exemption.)

There are two stumbling blocks, Graham said: The act says the club house must be used "by persons who served in the armed forces and no one else." The Legion accepts associate, or family, members who may not have any formal tie to the services. As well, if council was to make a financial decision which would bind future councils, a public hearing must be held.

"It's a question of interpretation — theirs against ours," said Legionnaire Doug McAdam. "Why does it have to be pure?" He thought that by using associate members to block the exemption, the ministry was not recognizing the Legion's role as a veterans' club, or the veterans' service to the country.

"I'm trying to safeguard this Legion," McAdam said of the reason behind the request. "If it went out, this community would be the loser."

*7.9% financing offer available with no limit on the amount financed on new and unused or demonstrator 1991 Chevy Cavalier and Pontiac Sunbird models purchased from dealer inventory for a limited time starting May 15th, 1991, on retail purchases only. 9.9% financing offer available with no limit on the amount financed on selected other new and unused or demonstrator 1990 models purchased from dealer inventory for a limited time only. These offers available only to qualified retail buyers financing their purchase through GMAC on a minimum 12 month/maximum 48 month contract. 1.9% financing offer available with no limit on the amount financed on all new and unused or demonstrator 1990 and prior year models purchased from dealer inventory for a limited time only. Offer available only to qualified retail buyers financing their purchase through GMAC for a 12 month contract term. Other finance rates and terms also available. See your dealer for full details. Availability and selection of new 1990 models may vary by dealer. Some applications will be subject to approval by GMAC. Offer includes dealer participation. Example for 1991 Corsica or Sunbird models: For $12,000 financed at 7.9% A.P.R., the monthly payment is $292.30. Cost of borrowing is $2,034.72. Total amount to be repaid is $14,034.72. Example for selected other 1990 models: For $15,000 financed at 7.9% A.P.R., the monthly payment is $378.71. Cost of borrowing is $2,720.08. Total amount to be repaid is $17,720.08. Example for 1990 models: For $10,000 financed at 9.9% A.P.R., the monthly payment is $202.30. Cost of borrowing is $2,034.72. Total amount to be repaid is $12,034.72. Example for selected other 1990 models: For $15,000 financed at 9.9% A.P.R., the monthly payment is $303.47. Cost of borrowing is $3,034.72. Total amount to be repaid is $18,034.72. These finance example rates are combined with other new cashback offers also available. Cashback amounts vary by model. See your dealer for full details. Based on a $1,000 cashback on the alternative to 1991 Corsica and Sunbird models, legislation requires that the value be included in the cost of borrowing example in order to arrive at an effective interest rate. In the example given, the effective interest rate would be 11.57% A.P.R. and the total cost of borrowing including the $1,000 cashback not taken would be $2,720.08. Similarly, assuming a $750 cashback on the alternative to selected 1990 and prior year models, the effective interest rate and total cost of borrowing including the $750 cashback not taken would be 15.40% A.P.R. and $523.10 respectively. Special Option Package Bonus based on MSRP value of no extra charge option on bonus option credit available on selected specialty equipped new and unused 1991 Chevy Cavalier and Pontiac Sunbird models. See your participating GM Dealer for full details. Based on Computerized national new passenger vehicle registrations for the 12 month period through December 1990 for Chevy Cavalier and Pontiac Sunbird combined.

HOME & VACATION SHOW

Annual show set to begin this Friday

THE DAYS are getting hotter, which means summer is almost here, bringing with it Haliburton's annual Home and Vacation Show. This popular three day event has been bringing in crowds to the Dysart arena and the Haliburton Curling Club for over a decade. In fact, this year's edition of the Home Show is the 13th annual event.

Whether you're building a new home or planning renovations, considering the purchase of a new boat or motor or a new set of wheels for those summer escapes, you'll find a great deal to keep you busy at the Home Show.

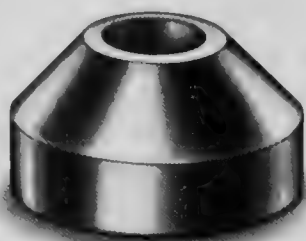

Co-ordinator Dorothy Clement has been lining up exhibitors for the event since January. Over a 100 booths will be in operation for consumers to browse through, 80 in the Dysart arena and 30 in the Haliburton Curling Club. The response from businesses has been so great, organizers were forced to put some interested people on a waiting list. To utilize available space, exhibitors will also set up displays in front of the curling club.

Consumers are warned not to be overwhelmed by the magnitude of the show, as they are free to take a leisurely stroll through the exhibits at their own pace. Stopping and chatting to owners and local operators has always been one of the most popular aspects of the Home Show.

HOME & VACATION SHOW

Fashion shows, clown will keep visitors busy

The show gets underway at noon this Friday and runs until Sunday afternoon. Hours are noon to 10 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

A number of special activities will be featured at this year's Home Show. For those who love the sounds of the bagpipes, on Friday night at 7 p.m. the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band will entertain the crowds. This will be followed by an exhibition of Highland Dancing, which starts at 7:30 p.m.

Also on Friday night, at 8:30, the first of three fashion shows will be presented. WindSurFinn begins the trio of shows at the Curling Club, and again on Saturday night at 8 p.m. The final fashion show will be presented by The Village Shoppe Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

To provide an extra source of entertainment, Bobo The Clown will be on hand to keep everyone in the summer spirit.

A pipe band and an exhibition of Highland dancing are only two of the special activities planned for the Home Show.

Arena and Curling Club will be filled to capacity with booths

For Roland Zeitz, a century of living can be summed up in one syllable:

WORK!

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

WHERE DOES ONE BEGIN to describe the life of someone who has lived for 100 years? His philosophies of life? Or the experiences from which those philosophies were gleaned? Why not get to the nuts and bolts of it: What's his secret for keeping so healthy this past century?

With Roland Zeitz the answer is made simpler because he can boil it down to one syllable: work.

"Work. You must live and you must work to live," says Mr. Zeitz, a veteran of two world wars who has definitely earned his fatherly tone. "Don't worry about (how to live to be 100.) Just go ahead and do your work. Your lifespan will take care of itself."

"I intend to live to be 120. Why shouldn't I? That's my intent. As a man thinks, so shall he be. If you think someone's got to do all the work for you, what good are you?"

Talking about wives, his partner for 67 years is quietly sitting beside him at the kitchen table of their Cardiff village home.

"Don't fight," 93-year-old Ethel Zeitz says of the secret to marital bliss. Her advice might be short and to the point, but her husband's is as blunt: "Look, it's simple, very simple," he says, as if making a marriage work was something everyone can do naturally. "Man and woman complement each other. When you find a person you want to live your life with, that's marriage. Some look for a rich man, or a handsome man. Is that marriage? A couple that wants to live together, they do. What does a ceremony have to do with it? You register on paper your vows. Does that change anything?"

"The man does what he has to do and can do and the wife does the same."

Just in case you don't believe all this wisdom about work, Mr. Zeitz tells you a story, in a slow, patient drawl. One of his canoes at the vast hunting camp he used to manage was at a faraway lake. By the time he got there, night was fast approaching. His arm was crippled, but he wanted to get home. Painful as it was, he lifted his arm for each stroke of the paddle. "Before I got the six miles home, the pain was gone. It learned me something: Get out and do the work and the pain will disappear."

Work.

Simple as it may seem, that's not the end of the story. It's not even the beginning. To find that, you have to go back to June 1, 1891, when the eleventh Zeitz child was born on a farm near Wexford, Michigan.

As the last name implies, Roland Zeitz's father was born in Germany; his mother was from Holland. They immigrated to America in 1850 to seek freedom in a country where "you didn't have to be someone to own land."

The cabin which housed the family of 14 — Mr. Zeitz is the only one still living — was one and a half storeys, 16 by 20 feet. "There was a lean-to at the back which served as a bedroom and kitchen. In my earliest memory, I and two brothers slept in a trundle bed. The room was very cramped and at night we were shoved under my parents' bed."

'I admired those uniforms,' Mr. Roland says of why he signed up in 1915. 'That good clothing, free, just for joining the army.'

"Both mother and father were dead before 1900. Mother died of pneumonia, and father, it's called a stroke now. My oldest brother was made the head of the family and an unmarried sister took the place of mother. She was 16 when she took over. . . . And yet I remember a very happy childhood. I never had the opportunity to complete my education because in those days we had to write the eighth grade exam — they call it Entrance here — and be boarded 14 miles away. It took eight days to write the exam and we didn't have the money (to pay for boarding.) But you had to go to school until you passed Entrance or were 16. I could do chores before school and I could lots of chores after school."

"Life was easy in those days. We lived well."

In 1912, he decided to leave his roots behind and move to Canada. Why? "Free land. Cut over land in Michigan was $10 an acre. In Canada you could get 160 acres of timbered land, free, merely for living on it and improving it. Canada had a population of five million then. It was open for new things, not tied down to something."

His feet landed him in Monetville, near Sturgeon Falls. As Mr. Zeitz describes it, it was a free man's Utopia. "We had the land free, lived in a log house, partridge were plentiful and you could kill partridge and sell them for as high as one dollar a pair. No one bothered you as long as you didn't try to make a commercial job."

But a man needs a little rest, and for relaxation, he went over to his sister's, who just happened to be married to an uncle of a young woman named Ethel Mercer.

'Man and woman complement each other,' says Roland Zeitz, here with his wife of 67 years, Ethel. 'When you find a person you want to live your life with, that's marriage.'

Ethel was born just eight miles from Wexford, Michigan, although it's unlikely the two first met there. In 1913, Ethel's parents also decided to take advantage of the free land, although they didn't ask their daughter first.

"If I'd have known the way it was I wouldn't have come," she says, conjuring up bad memories. "There was so many mosquitoes. You couldn't sleep, you couldn't do nothing. We wrapped our legs with newspaper before putting our stockings on. You had to or your legs would be all red from bites."

Neither of them, it turned out, were quite yet ready to settle down with each other.

"In 1914, I was just learning to be a man, standing on my own," says Mr. Zeitz, for whom independence is a badge of honour. "In November, 1915, I was in Winnipeg. I had been out West in the Harvest. We had a stopover in Winnipeg and the first recruitment officer I came to, I signed up (to join the army.) I admired those uniforms. They cost a lot of money." Then he adds, with a smile in his eyes that hints at a touch of youthful vanity, "That good clothing, free, just for joining the army."

After training, Mr. Zeitz was sent to England, where for two years "I taught men how to aim, to press the trigger and how to hit what they shot at." This was in preparation for being dispatched to the front in Flanders. "You killed or was killed, you had no choice," he says matter-of-factly of his impressions of World War I. "The trenches were deep enough you could stand in mud and water to your knees. A day's ration was a 12 ounce tin of Argentine beef and a four-and-a-half can of hard tack."

"The Colonials had to eat it, they had nothing else. But the English left their hard tack and beef in the trenches so we lived fat off the hog when we got to where they had been."

It's hard to tell whether Mr. Zeitz is in jest, or just has the best poker face when delivering his ironic punch lines.

"But man alive, we got off the farm and saw things." On November 5, 1917 he was shot and invalided back to Canada in May, 1918. "We had white bread and butter," he says, as if sharing a treasure. "You'd have to experience it to know how good it was. To go back home, that was unforgettable freedom. It was life, which you didn't get the army, not as a Colonial anyway. Colonials were expendable: they did the fighting. As we were going in to take over the front, I was in 27th Battalion, 2nd Division. We met 4th Division coming out as we were going in. I saw a friend from Winnipeg. He told me that out of 1,050 men, when they came out there were 27."

"You think we weren't terrified? But you got orders to go and you went. If you tried to go back you'd be shot."

When he returned to Canada, his adventure behind him, Mr. Zeitz was ready to settle down, and he saw no one finer to settle down with than Ethel Mercer. Looking over at her, with eyes which rely more on memories, he says "The first time I was conscious of you, you were sitting watching your day fussing with his plow. A pretty girl watching her dad."

"After all was said and done, I said I'd put my cards on the table. I'd built a home, raised a crop, I was prepared then to share my life. I invited her to go for a walk. We went to the lake and back and I asked her to marry me. She said she'd think about it."

Then, to his wife, he smiles "Don't tell her what you thought. . . She had her own affairs. I told her 'You just do what you know you have to do.'"

"I just wanted to get out. There was nothing in Monetteville," she says.

Ethel Mercer was a young girl whose horizons had been limited by the fact there were few roads leading out of Monetteville. She knew there was more to young womanhood than newspaper-wrapped legs, so she decided to go to Toronto to work as a domestic helper. "I wanted to work at Eaton's but they only paid $14 a week and room and board cost $10, plus you had to pay for the streetcar and clothes. You couldn't do that."

In the two years she stayed in Toronto, "he didn't write too many letters" but his proposal was always on the back of her mind. Finally, on November 15, 1923, they married in Sudbury. "It was the dirtiest looking place," she says.

"It was a grand and glorious wedding," says her husband, obviously the romantic of this down-to-earth couple. Before they were married, Mr. Zeitz invited young Ethel into his hotel room to discuss their plans. "We hadn't been there half an hour when the house detective barged in — he expected to catch us in bed, I guess. I asked him how you went about getting married and he told me how to find a preacher. The family didn't make it to the wedding and it's a good thing they didn't. It was a personal affair between Ethel and I and her family didn't have no business in it."

"I had a suit, blue with a gray hat," Mrs. Zeitz remembers before her husband adds, "I didn't know anything about weddings. I was filled with curiosity and I learned."

Back to Monetteville they went, Mrs. Zeitz's brief fling with cosmopolitan life over for a lot longer than she thought.

They weren't there long until a rich American fisherman paid Mr. Zeitz to be his guide in the nearby Laurentians. Lawrence Jones of Louisville, Kentucky liked the area so much, he leased 94 square miles of forest from the Quebec government at the cost of $7 a square mile. In return, he had to protect the land, and so he hired Mr. Zeitz to be the warden and caretaker of the Beauchene Hunt and Fish Club. For that, one family had private use of 94 square miles of beautiful crown land.

"I travelled from anywhere from 60 miles a day," a conscientious employee remembers. (The retired Zeitzes are still on the company's payroll, a provision of Mr. Jones' will.) "Just to go around the perimeter was 40 miles and you hadn't been anywhere."

To protect the forests and trees, Mr. Zeitz had to make sure no one was trespassing or hunting on the property — and that included the wolves, many of which Mr. Zeitz trapped and killed. "I attempted to exterminate wolves as a threat to wildlife. . . They have a code of their own. A male wolf will never lead you to his den; he'll stay right out in the open to protect his family. Female wolves, that's the first place they head to to escape."

"One day a female got away with a trap on it. I chased her for four days. I learned where her dens were but they have more than one entrance. I saw her crawl under a slab of rock. I got under there and she got as far away as she could. (Using a burning birch branch), I got to where I could see her eyes. When I started shooting with my Colt pistol, she started getting out. My heart beating was so loud. (Yet when I got out), the wolf had died of fright. Not one bullet hit her. That was the first wolf that was ever scared to death."

"I felt it was my obligation to destroy all wolves on the property. Today the timber wolf is considered an endangered species. I had a lot to do with that. I fulfilled my sense of duty and (trapping wolves) was a source of money. It's a matter of economics, the necessity to live."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Zeitz was back at the warden's cabin with four young children to take care of: Leigh, Dorothy, (Roland) Robert, and Buddy. Sometimes a winter would pass without her meeting another woman for companionship and support. The only contact with the outside world was by radio.

Those memories do not sit well with Mrs. Zeitz, who seems to have learned to cope with them by pushing them to the back of her mind. It's her husband who answers what those years were like for her.

"She had babies to take care of, she got no where, no chance to go shopping. Put yourself in her place. One word covers it: miserable. I'm speaking from personal knowledge. Five miles from the railroad — would you call it a happy life?"

That life was not made any easier when Mr. Zeitz joined the navy to take part in his second world war. "I was over age but they requested me to sign on because they were in desperate need of people who could keep diesels operating."

(Over the years, Mr. Zeitz has taught himself a myriad of skills. He might never have passed Grade 8, but his real education continued for decades, thanks in part to his voracious appetite for books. In World War I, he taught himself how to play chess. "My sergeant major was a chess fiend. He caught me (to win) and he snorted and roared with laughter and made me feel idiotic. Within a week I was beating him. I had incentive.")

He was sent to Halifax, then back to Quebec where he was responsible for "de-gouzing" the ships. This meant putting a big coil of wire around the deck and passing an electrical current through it "to neutralize the magnetic field of the ship" to protect it from mines. Another job was being engineer on the HCMS Cleopatra, while his son Leigh was in the airforce. (Son Bob would also join the navy and still lives in British Columbia.) Today, when Mr. Zeitz joins Cardiff's Remembrance Day celebrations, he certainly has a lot not to forget.

When Mr. Zeitz returned from the navy, salvation came for Mrs. Zeitz. Warm, relaxing salvation in the form of a winter home on the island of Bimini in the Bahamas. Mr. Jones owned property on the island made famous by Ernest Hemingway, and the Zeitzes were asked to oversee construction and then manage the property. The bad memories of the cold, Canadian winters melted away. This was Mrs. Zeitz's answer to her prayers.

Eventually, especially because of the maliciousness of the new game warden, the Zeitzes returned less and less to Beauchene. When they saw an article in the Canadian magazine describing a quiet little village in the Highlands where homes cost only $5,000, they decided to move to Cardiff in 1964. Always with his eye on a bargain, that Mr. Zeitz.

The mines had shut down and Cardiff reinvented itself as the first retirement community in Ontario. Life was friendly and gentle here, and the Zeitzes contented themselves with their gardening and hobbies. In the winters, they used to travel, as far away as Norway, Sweden, Alaska and South Africa — where Mr. Zeitz bought a rough diamond and taught himself how to cut it to make a ring for his wife. "You alter life to accomplish what you want to do."

Going on vacation was the Zeitzes' salvation after long isolated winters in the bush.

Now they tend to stay at their Spruce Street home more often, going about the village on their motorized scooters. Because of his failing eyesight, Mr. Zeitz had to give up his driver's license — two years ago. On June 1, it is likely that nearly all of Cardiff will gather to wish their only centenarian a happy birthday.

And what do you think should be Mr. Zeitz's last words for this story? What else?

"My conviction is that if we didn't work, we'd be dead and gone before now. There's been incredible change in the luxury of living. People don't have to work at all and they live. In the early years, that wasn't possible."

"I enjoyed doing that work. I had to do it, and do it right as far as it was humanly possible to do." Work. Remember that.

Cancer can be beaten.

Prom leaves pharoahs rockin' in their tomb

by SUSAN CAMPBELL

Staff Reporter

IF THEY HAD A WINDOW on the world of kids these days, the pharoahs would be rolling in their tombs. Rock and rolling, that is. Or perhaps doing a mummy 'rap'.

These were the contemporary sounds coming from a portable stereo sitting on the banks of the Nile River, which on any other Friday would resemble the floor of your average high school gym.

Palm trees, Egyptian murals, pillars and a 15-foot pyramid were just some of the sights which greeted the 160 guests at the "Midnight Oasis" prom at Haliburton Highlands Secondary school on Saturday night.

For the past two months, three Grade 9 art classes have been painting Egyptian murals as part of the year's curriculum and in keeping with this year's prom theme.

"I chose this theme because it ties in with art history and design and helps meet the art history requirement," says art teacher Dave Stephenson.

The prom committee — student representatives, student council members and a staff advisor — formed last November. A disc jockey was hired from Toronto who came with his own light show.

"We were more organized this year," says committee vice-president Eliza O'Neill. "The main problem is with too many people doing too many things." But with a lot more committees this year, the labour was divided up so one person didn't end up doing everything.

"I'm prommed out right now," says an exhausted Crystal Bain, the committee's promotional representative. In the hopes of getting a larger turn-out and combatting teenage intrepidity, Crystal advertised the prom over the school announcements, stressing that it was quite alright to show up without a "date."

"If you go as part of a group you don't have to dance with just one person all evening," she says. "About 20 or 30 girls will come as a group because it's more acceptable for them to be in a group dancing together."

Even though less than a quarter of the students attending HHSS bought tickets for the $10 buffet and dance, Bain says the prom is an event primarily for the junior grades to get involved and participate in.

The seniors, she says, usually have enough of a celebration at the end of the year with the graduation dance. And don't even think of going to both events if you plan to wear the same dress or suit! (Potentially guilty chaperones may wish to check with a teenager to see if they qualify for exemption from this rule).

So, what do kids in 1991 wear to a high school formal? "Pink dresses are definitely in this year," says one female student. "Well I'm wearing dark blue," says another.

Long or short? Blank looks, as if to answer

"dresses are dresses". And for the young men? Tuxedos of course. Indeed, some things will never change.

'I'm all prommed out right now,' says Crystal Bain, right, helping Eliza O'Neil, Saskia Smith, Tracy Simms and Vicky Beach with the prom decorations.

COMMUNITY NEWS

OPP comes to Wilberforce

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

On Wednesday May 22 at the Lloyd Watson Centre Staff Sergeant Elliot of the Minden OPP was on hand to introduce the subject of Community Police enforcement in this area. About 75 citizens were on hand to learn more about the project and to tender questions. The idea of having a community officer based in Wilberforce has met with approval and will go into effect some time in July. An office will be set up by the Monmouth Council and located in Wilberforce.

It was election night at the Royal Canadian Legion for Wilberforce Branch 624 on May 21st. The following members form the new slate for the coming year: President Joyce Gillies, Past President Don Shosenberg, 1st Vice Pres. Pat Gallen, 2nd Vice Pres. Edwin Scott, 3rd. Vice pres. Scott Parke, Secretary Joan Dickson, Treasurer Margaret Brooks, Executive members Jim Driscoll, Harry Dale, Chuck Irvine, Mary Driscoll, Brian Ablett and John Rogers, Sergeant at Arms Charlie Harflett.

Supervising the installation were members from the Cardiff Legion: President Larry Burke, Cy Yeoman and Bill Emery.

Chosen as Legionnaire of the year was Edwin Scott, making it the second time that this honour has been awarded to Comrade Scott. Information about the election was from Edwin Scott.

In honour of their 35th wedding anniversary Ken and Nadeen Sanderson were treated to an afternoon at Cullen Gardens by the family. Following an enjoyable walk through the beautiful gardens, everyone enjoyed a delicious dinner. There were 17 family members present including Ken's sister Ruth Saunders. Ken says that these happy occasions bring families together and are greatly appreciated by every parent.

Last year's champion bowling team, the Topaz, allowed some of the other teams to take on this year's high places but rallied at season's end to win the B Championship. You will remember that members of the Topaz team are mainly from this area with Sandy Smith our respected captain, Marian Donaldson, Ida Holmes, Cindy Smith, Bonnie Johnson and Winnie Schofield. Ida Holmes takes part in most of the senior games and finished second in the bowling games at Carnarvon.

Coming on June 4th is a public meeting sponsored by the Wilberforce Heritage Guild to bring you up to date on progress made toward the preservation of the Red Cross Outpost building. Come and bring a friend to the Lloyd Watson Centre at 7:30 p.m.

Wedding gathers 110 happy well-wishers

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Esther Cooper, daughter of Basle and Joan Cooper, and Graydon Sipe were married at the West Guilford Community Centre on May 18, 1991. Tim Priest officiating at the ceremony. Tim's wife, Cheryl, sister of the bride, was matron of honour, and Carl Packard was the best man. Jason Sipe was ring-bearer and Jody Sipe the flower girl. About 110 wedding guests were present for the happy occasion. Our good wishes and congratulations to the newlywed couple.

Peggy Pouw and daughter Linnie have had a visit with Peggy's father, Carl Sawyer, over the holiday weekend.

Melanie Duchene was part of the H.H.S.S. track team at the Central Ontario track and field meet in Nanawee. We congratulate her on winning the gold medal for the longest throw in the senior girls' discus.

(Bernice) Toby West, is returning to Soanichon, B.C. after a 6 weeks visit to her mother, Elva Cooper.

The St. Andrew's Church bake and yard-sale proved a great success on May 18th at the Centre. The good weather blessed the yard sales at many a site the same day: Allison's, Nancy Brink's, Bradley Bryant's, Jones', and Maple Sands to name a few.

Lakeside Golf Club is officially opened as of the holiday weekend in May under new ownership of Tom Clifford. We wish in every success in this venture.

PEOPLE

A NEW HOME

Yugoslavian couple are happy to be here

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

NOT A LOT OF PEOPLE would want to try to set up a home, a family, and a job in the middle of a recession, but Darko Knezevic relished the opportunity.

"When I saw Canada I said 'This is the best.' Maybe many don't agree with me, but I'm happy here," says the Yugoslavian immigrant who has been living in Canada since November 1989.

He now lives with his wife Mirjana and son Deni on Pine Lake in West Guilford.

His decision to come to Canada was not made rashly. He went window shopping, first checking out Germany, where his factory sent him for specialized training. "But they are cool people. You can't make close relationships with them."

He visited Austria and Switzerland as well, but each place was not as hospitable as he would like, so he kept looking.

Then he came to visit his relatives in Canada. "When I saw it I thought that I want to live here." But because he did not know what his wife would think about Canada he did not make any firm plans to settle here.

He went back to Yugoslavia, and with his wife came back for a holiday. When she got here she liked it too, so they decided to apply as immigrants.

They left Yugoslavia because Mr. Knezevic says it is impossible to stay ahead of a galloping increase in the cost of living. As an example, imagine one day you buy a loaf of bread for $1.25, but the next day when you go to the store it is $2.50. And even working at two jobs doesn't give you any better a life than you had before. "So many things sound ridiculous. You are working overtime and could not make enough for a normal life. I wasn't a kind of bum who doesn't want to work, but you couldn't make any money."

The economy, he says, is the main reason Yugoslavia is having so many difficulties now. In the past few weeks the country has come to the point of civil war and military dictatorship because of ethnic tensions.

"When the economy goes down people try to judge each other. They throw stones. For me it is hard to say the reason. I was an ordinary worker . . . But justice, everything is mixed up. The basic problem is the economy. If you don't have enough to feed your children you will do anything."

For their first 14 months here they were not allowed to work. Mr. Knezevic found a job in March, after receiving his landed immigrant status and Mrs. Knezevic has just found a job as a cleaner at the Lochhaven Inn.

Before leaving Yugoslavia for their "holiday," Mr. Knezevic sold his electronics workshop and musical equipment, and the money from that got them here and helped pay their bills, but without the support of relatives and friends they could not have survived.

They moved in with Mr. Knezevic's cousin Stefan Bjelis and his family at the Windermere Cottage Resort, and shared their house. "They have a big heart, lots of love. It wasn't easy for them to have nine people in one home."

The Knezevics joined the local Baptist community, and the churches in Haliburton and West Guilford have helped them in the tough process of getting settled into a new country.

"They brought food at Christmas. It was in bags on the doorstep with no names, but we knew who did it," says Mr. Knezevic.

They also helped Mrs. Knezevic with shopping, a difficult task for someone who didn't speak English.

And when they achieved landed immigrant status people at the churches helped them look for work. "People said it was pretty tough. I don't know if I'm lucky, but word got around that I was looking for work and I managed to find something," says Mr. Knezevic.

He works as a surveyor's assistant now, but he hopes to use his electronics skills soon. "I like taking things apart and putting them together," he says, fiddling around with the insides of a radio. "I want to begin repairing electronics, but I need many things first. I need a workshop and tools, and books about parts and technology."

And to keep his fingers limber he is going to be playing his guitar, a hobby he picked up in

'In my country there are no blackflies', laughs Darko Knezevic, here with wife Mirjana, of Yugoslavian summers. 'The first time I saw them here they went in my nose, ears, eyes. I thought "Where am I, in a jungle?"'

Yugoslavia. For years he was in a band called the "Living Stones," named not as a homage to the Jagger-Richards band, but an allusion to a verse in the Bible.

He has been playing at the West Guilford Baptist Church, and hopes to be able to give them a keyboard and other musical equipment soon.

Settled into their home in West Guilford, the Knezevics look like any other young Canadian couple, but adapting to many aspects of Canadian life has been strange for them. "It's a different type of weather. The winters are more sharp, the summers more hot. There are more differences in the seasons. There is no spring and no fall," Mr. Knezevic jokes.

"It was pretty chilly. I learned many things. I had normal boots, but they are not good in 25 or 30 below weather. Stefan gave me advice on how to dress."

And, like many people coming to Haliburton County for the first time, the wildlife took him by surprise. "In my country there are no blackflies. The first time I saw them here they went in my nose, ears, eyes. I thought 'Where am I, in a jungle?'"

But, like most people who live here, he has found a way of coping with the insects. "I tell you right now I don't care. They are not beautiful, but it's part of nature."

The Knezevics have been living in their cabin rent-free for six months, the generosity of the cabin's owners Dick and Jean Henderson typical of the warm reception they say they have received since moving here.

"People are friendly here, you can trust people. They give you a hand, give you advice. That's why I stay in this area. Maybe it's different in Toronto, but I like people here."

'Bearing up' for an innovative exhibit

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

HIS NAME is Bill Fraser, a freelance chain-saw artist and children's story book writer, but he wants you to call him Jack Wood and visualize him as the archetypical Canadian woodsman.

"Jack Wood has worked cutting down trees, and digging ditches. He's a plain ordinary guy," says Fraser about his persona, who is putting on an exhibition at the Rails' End Gallery between June 1 and 22.

Entitled Bear Stomach, the show contains chairs and other things Fraser has designed. One of the chairs was on Highland Street on Saturday, a rough-hewn wooden chair cut to look like a fearsome bear.

As people went down the street, Fraser coaxed them into the chair and took pictures which will be incorporated into the exhibit.

When any adult sat in the chair, the bear's hands jumped and its sharply-toothed mouth sprang open hungrily.

Fraser says the bear is one of Jack Woods' friends, and was convinced by a group of children to eat their parents. This is why the chair's mouth will only open if an adult sits on it.

The contraption is made with hollowed logs, springs and pulleys.

Fraser says having people participate in his art is the purpose of what he does. "Having them sit in the chair makes it a personal experience . . . Personal interaction, that's what art's all about."

The exhibit contains, fittingly, a number of wooden bear stomachs people can look into. The theme of the show is What do bears dream about?

"Bears don't think about VCRs and TVs. They think about food," says Fraser, hinting at what will be in the exhibit.

He says seeing Bear Stomach will be a fun experience for the whole family.

When adults, such as Stephanie Hartwick, above, sit in 'Jack Wood's chair, it tries to eat them.

Home Support offers drivers course again

by DONNA PACEY,
Executive Director

The popular 55 Alive Taking Control is returning to the county. This is an innovative driver refresher course for Canadians 55 years and over.

date is June 26 and 27, at the PineStone. For further information please call Edna Sedgwick at 286-2671 or Carl Wallace at 754-2648.

It is Good Neighbours Week at Haliburton County Home Support Services.

We salute the many who take a little time . . . a lot of caring . . . and a willingness to lend a helping hand. We encourage others to take a moment to make a difference. It feels good!

The Travelogue will be held on Wednesday, May 29th at 11:30 a.m. Walter Webb from Haliburton will show slides about Alaska. Bring a sandwich. We provide soup and coffee or tea.

The cost will be $1.50 for those with Activity Card and $1.75 for those without.

We hope you have registered for our Annual General Meeting and luncheon at the PineStone on Friday, May 31st. If you can't make that we hope to see you at our booth at the Haliburton County Home Show on May 31st, June 1 and 2nd.

Talent in Carnarvon

On Friday May 31st a Variety Night will be held in the C.E. Building at 7:30 in keeping with our centennial celebration.

David and Janet Moore of Oshawa visited with the Bill McKays over the holiday weekend.

The County Home Support Services will hold its annual dinner at the PineStone on May 31st at 12:45 followed by the meeting with guest speakers. Please call if you plan to attend. Cost is $11.95.

Anyone interested in assisting the forming of a sewing circle at Highland Crest Seniors Home will be gratefully appreciated. Please contact them.

Soyers Lake cottagers hear of ways to preserve nature

By BRUCE BIRRELL

THE SPRING MEETING of the Soyers Lake Ratepayers Association Inc. was held on Saturday, May 18th at the PineStone Inn. President Lew McCorriston welcomed the 45 members and guests. A minute of silence was observed in memory of Mr. John Robinson, a seasonal resident for many years who passed away in February, 1991.

MAPLE INC.

Rick Kwissa, Vice-President of Mutual Association for the Protection of the Lake Environment in Ontario explained that this non-profit organization was formed in 1987 in response to a growing demand by cottages, lake-users and naturalists to help preserve Ontario's natural lake environment. The association now embraces 650 lakes and provides free trees and shrubs plus volunteers to help plant them along denuded shorelines. Mr. Kwissa showed slides revealing the damage done to the lakes by thoughtless removal of all trees, and also the improvement that can be achieved by replanting. Using the "Maple 10" principle, the first 10 feet back from the shoreline is planted with shrubby willow, dogwood, Virginia creeper, meadowsweet and sweetgail. Seventy-five percent along the shoreline is replanted, leaving 25 percent of the property for dock and recreational use. Owners are encouraged to leave natural growth such as bulrushes undisturbed for they act as excellent water filters. MAPLE Inc. has set up nurseries for growing the young trees it provides free to its members. Volunteers help with the planting and the association has only one paid staff member.

Lynda Campbell, Vice-President of S.L.R.A., thanked Mr. Kwissa for his informative and thought-provoking presentation and presented him

Minden W.I. meets

by JEANNE SEARS

The May 15th meeting of Minden Women's Institute was at the Common Room. After the usual opening the Roll Call had 15 members present. Irene Moore reported sending 14 cards for a variety of occasions and collections for this fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken. The lunch was arranged for the Fashion Show of June 6 with members offering goodies and supplies and some coming to help. Programs are to be planned Wed. June 29th with officers and executive at Jean Cox's home at 10 a.m. We are making a donation of $50 to the fire department's Jaws of Life Fund.

A drop-in tea is to be planned by the executive for a Women's Institute Day at the Common Room in June.

We had a brief quiz on the Hand book and the four weedsmuir books were on display. A vote of thanks went to Jean Marsh for her donation of a new electric teakettle.

Members will meet at the Municipal parking lot for rides to the June 19th luncheon-meeting at 11:30 to go to Gwen Cox's home.

All are to bring dishes, cutlery and food.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Cadets hold inspection; seniors form committee

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

The following officers of the Ladies Auxiliary have been installed: President—Jan Shipley; Immediate Past President Vera Dean; First Vice President—Nina Chambers; Second Vice President—Cathie Juby; Secretary—Jean Marsh; Treasurer Janet Tice; Sgt.—

at-Arms—Verna Draper; Sports Officer—Jean Fletcher; Executive Committee—Laura Bannon, Kina Burmania, Isabel Craig, Eileen Morrison, Dorothy Stirrett, Kay Wyllie. Congratulations to all.

The Annual 1129 Cadet Inspection was held on May 26. Now is the time to start thinking of enrolling in September in this great youth leadership course and to share in the fun the cadets have.

The Legion Seniors will hold their first regular meeting on May 29 at 1:00 p.m. All seniors 55 and over are welcome. Come, share in the planning of many exciting events.

The sports committee will hold its annual dinner on May 31. Irene Higgins is the chairman.

Have you signed up for the trip to the Woodbine races or for the Bluejay ball game? Sheets are in the Clubroom. Don't delay.

Yes, it is confirmed. A great afternoon listening to the songs and comedy of Barbershop Quartets has been set for July 21. Watch this newspaper for advertisements with details.

The Youth Education program is finished for this year. Chairman Dave Stirrett, the co-chairmen, Ladies Auxiliary, teachers, parents and students are to be commended for another great year.

On direction from the general body, your Branch was pleased to present a cheque to Haliburton Hospital in the amount of $6,000 to purchase a new and badly needed communication system.

The next general meeting will be held on June 6 at which time the new president and executive will be in office. Having attended several conventions across this great country, I am convinced that Branch 129 ranks at the top. Let's all turn out an support our new officers and keep our Branch proud and strong.

Cottagers unite for the municipal election

with a copy of Christopher Bishop's book of Haliburton photographs. The Association voted to take out a sustaining membership in Maple Inc. for $50, an a number of individuals paid $10 to become sustaining members.

ENVIRONMENTAL DO'S AND DON'TS

Elizabeth Turner had taken time out from her teaching and motherly duties to compile a list of "Do's and Don'ts" for new cottagers (and some not-so-new) on how to protect the lake environment. When finalized, the list will be distributed to S.L.R.A. members with the summer flyer.

MUNICIPAL CANDIDATES

On motion unanimously carried, S.L.R.A. Inc. thanked Jean Anthon and Grant Ploard for offering themselves as candidates and pledged support for their election on November 12, 1991. A further motion was approved to contribute the sum of $50 towards the operating expenses of the Council of A.H.M. Ratepayers Associations. Lew McCriston urged all ratepayers to cast their votes on November 12, or at the advance polls on Saturday November 2 and Wednesday November 6, or to vote by proxy.

BUSINESS MEETING

After a coffee break was the business portion of the meeting. A number of topics were covered. Disappointment was expressed that the Zoning By-law 86-26 passed by Anson, Hindon and Minden Council on February 26, 1986 had still not received O.M.B. approval because of outstanding objections. The Chairman confirmed that supplementary letters patent were issued to S.L.R.A. on May 25, 1991 to include the word "Inc." in the name of the corporation and to change its objects to conform with those set out in the by-laws. It was noted that the N.D.P. government of Ontario had not yet honoured its election promise regarding the additional beds for Haliburton Hospital. The President reported briefly on the F.O.C.A. fall and spring meetings which had received excellent coverage in The Haliburton County Echo and the Minden Times. John Harrington requested that a letter be written to the Roads Superintendent concerning the deplorable condition of the section of Soyers Lake Road leading to Alexander Road. Treasurer Neale Harris tabled a report of receipts and expenditures which showed a small credit balance in the Association's account. David Pengelly reported that work on the 1991 Lake Map and Directory was under way. He had also prepared a draft Newsletter which will be distributed in the summer. The membership agreed that it would be in order to solicit advertising revenue to help defray postage costs.

POLLUTION CONTROL

Ross Patridge, who has carried out the lake water testing program for the past sixteen years, reported on the 1990 test results which he had extracted (with difficulty) in draft form only from the Ministry of the Environment. He stated that secchi disc readings averaged 4.4 metres and the average chlorophyll reading was 4. Both readings represented a continuing upward trend although not serious at this point. Once again the value of upgrading older septic systems was underlined, and a concept was put forward of making an official inspection of septic systems an integral part of negotiations for property sale.

66' LAKESHORE ROAD ALLOWANCES

Attention was drawn to several press advertisements regarding the closure of 66' lakeshore road allowances on Soyers Lake. Bruce and Primrose Birrell reported that the group application by 13 residents of Poverty Bay had reached the final stage, but that they had been obliged to employ the municipality's lawyer in Lindsay instead of being able to use the services of their own local solicitor. Concern was expressed regarding the M.N.R.'s policy of rejecting applications for closure on lakes containing trout and possibly on all lakes in the future.

ANNUAL CORN ROAST AND REGATTA

Plans were made for the annual Corn Roast and Regatta which will take place on Saturday, August 17, 1991. This is always a memorable occasion for young and old alike. John Campbell volunteered to chair the corn roast committee and other members offered their assistance.

TAX INCREASES

Attention was drawn to a recent full-page advertisement in the local newspapers, in which Gary Kenney asked for support in his and John Beachli's campaign against runaway tax increases. After considerable discussion, a resolution was passed indicating the Association's support of the views of Mr. Kenney and his group as expressed in the advertisement regarding the management of public funds and major increases in taxes.

1991 FALL MEETING

The date of the Fall Meeting was set for Saturday, October 12, 1991 at 7:30 p.m. The meeting adjourned at 11:30 p.m., with the members well satisfied that a lot of ground had been covered.

HALIBURTON FAMILY VIOLENCE MENS GROUP
For men who physically abuse their partners. In Haliburton, there is a group counselling program to assist men, at no cost to them, in dealing with behaviours that physically, mentally or emotionally hurt the ones they love. This is a confidential service that does not judge or condemn, but helps you and those around you live a less troubled life.
For information, referral and support leave

I WANT to express my warmest thanks for the Home Care Office in Haliburton, to the Victorian Order of Nurses, Helen Berry, Sharon Marsh and Audrey Winsley for their help and consideration during my husband's illness. Without their professional and personal care, my family and I, would never have been able to give to my Husband the care that we wanted him to have. To doctors Karl Hartwick and Gordon Smith, I want to extend my deepest thank you. Kalena Sirila.

THANK YOU

SPECIAL THANKS to Dr. Good, Halibur-ton, Dr. Belch and all the staff on the 2nd floor of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough. In gratitude to all my family and friends who gave me wife rides back and forth to the Hospital, for the cards, flowers, phone calls and prayers and the very welcome visits. God Bless, Charles Wise.

IN MEMORIAM

MINTZ — In loving memory of our Parents
Bert, April 8, 1982 — Linda, May 24, 1982.
How blessed the dead who die in the Lord
For their works do follow them, thus said
His Word.
Though we cry out in anguish, and is the way.
We know, He giveth us strength for the day.
This comforts the heart, though tears dim
our eyes
Of him who on God's precious promise relies.
So, may we look forward, our hope fixed on God
And follow the pathway our parents have trod.
Forever loved and remembered. The family.
32-P-28

IN LOVING MEMORY of a dear wife Doris Young who passed away Dec. 12, 1989.
What we would give if we could say
Hello Doris in the same old way
To hear your voice and see your smile
So you who have a wife
Cherish her with care
For you'll never know the heartache
Till you see her vacant chair.
Sadly missed and always remembered by Husband and sons & daughters.
Wm. Young
32-P-28

IN LOVING MEMORY of Mum & Grandma, MARY ROBERTSON, who passed away June 2, 1985.
